MOLOTOV, WARNING ARMS RACE ALREADY IS UNDERWAY, ASKS DISARMAMENT PLAN

Krug May Have UMW Demands; Talks Recess

Lewis Is Silent On Whatever Proposition He May Have Offered

INTERIOR SECRETARY HAS NOTHING TO SAY

Speculation Arises As Negotiations Are Recessed For 24 Hours

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 (AP) — John L. Lewis maintained rigid silence tonight on whatever contract demands he may have handed the government in his first bargaining sessions with Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug.

Four days remained in Lewis' time-table before he gives notice to Krug, with whom he made the current working agreement for 400,000 soft coal miners, that he means to terminate that contract November 20.

But the big mine leader, playing his cards close, gave no inkling publicly of what the miners may exact as the price of peace after November 20. Accompanied by 26 district presidents and other union officials, Lewis conferred with Krug for two and one-half hours. The meeting then recessed until 2:30 p. m. EST. tomorrow.

Krug Maintains Silence

Krug had nothing to say, either. The Secretary has differed with Lewis over legality of reopening the pact they made to end last spring's strike. There was no explanation of whether the contract was in the process of being opened.

Lewis, his miners, a handful of naval officers from Krug's Coal Mines Administration, and a score or more of reporters and photographers, were practically alone in the vast Interior Department building. It was closed for Armistice Day.

Speculation arose over the reason for the 24 hour recess, and three possibilities stood out:

1. Lewis had made his proposition —possibly calling for a shorter work week with little or no loss in take-home pay—and the government wanted time to study it.

2. Krug wanted to consult the operators on whatever contract terms Lewis had imposed. (There was no immediate communication with the operator representatives available here, however.)

3. The government had countered with something that required time for study by Lewis.

Development Presaged

Lewis' union district presidents were called in last week, presaging a development. They have been meeting with the union president over the weekend.

The board of directors of the Southern Coal Producers' Association, meantime, met in Cincinnati, presumably to discuss the coal price decontrols directed by President Truman Saturday night.

Most observers here thought that lifting of coal price ceilings would somehow give the government a lever to try to speed the return of the mines to the owners. They thought also it would possibly strengthein Lewis' bargaining hand because the operators would not have to gain OPA approval of prices offsetting any increased labor costs.

Prices Of Passenger Cars Are Increased $100 By GM

"WITHDRAWS" — Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, minister of New York's Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, announces his "withdrawal" to his congregation as pastor, climaxing his opposition to selling the edifice for a reported $4,000,000 to pay off a $750,000 mortgage.

Ford Intends "To Hold Line"; Chrysler Silent On Price Plans

DETROIT, Nov. 11, (AP) — General Motors, the automobile industry's biggest producer, hiked the prices of its passenger cars $100 today.

The not unexpected announcement, coming after a day-long meeting of General Motors executives, said the increases would place GM's prices "in a more reasonable relation to greatly increased costs of production."

When asked today for comment on the GM action, the Ford Motor Company, which earlier had announced no price increase was contemplated, quoted from a letter sent to 3,200 major Ford suppliers which said in part:

"There is plenty of justification for our raising prices at this time in order to give the company a fair and reasonable profit on its sales.

Ford Intends "To Hold Line"

"However, we feel that it is vitally necessary during this critical period of adjustment that all industry co-operate to avoid precipitous or unjustified increases in price."

The letter was signed by Alfred J. Browning, vice president and director of purchases, who said the company already had been assured by a number of its suppliers that they would maintain present price levels "until and unless substantial future cost increases make such a position impossible."

Browning said Ford intended to adjust prices of certain repair parts in order to correct "unnecessary hardship" incurred under OPA ceilings."

Otherwise, a Ford spokesman said, Browning's letter was intended to express the company's intention to "hold the line."

From the third member of the auto industry's "big three," Chrysler Corporation, there has been no word on possible pricing action.

There was no immediate comment from the CIO United Auto Workers on the GM announcement.

Three Reasons For Boost

President C. E. Wilson of General Motors ascribed three reasons for the price increase:

1. GM's dollar volume of business in the third quarter of 1946, although "about the same" as the previous peacetime quarterly peak of 1941, was "not on a satisfactory basis."

2. GM's prices as set by OPA "discriminated against General Motors." The OPA pricing formula and "its administration" gave competitors "substantially greater" price increases than were allowed General Motors.

3. OPA had "assumed" production would equal that of 1941 but because of basic materials shortages General Motors finds it "impossible" to achieve "any such rate of production at least during the next six months."

General Motors manufactures Cadillac, Pontiac, Chevrolet, Buick and Oldsmobile cars.

Labor-Industry Armistice Urged By Nation's Chief

Chief Executive Moves To Make Control-Free Economy Work

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11, (AP) — President Truman used the Armistice Day holiday today to urge a truce in labor-management warfare so the American economy, now largely free of controls, may function on all cylinders.

Meanwhile OPA Administrator Paul Porter called in key aides to help with what he termed the "pick and shovel work" of liquidating the price agency. Nearly all wage ceiling and all wage controls were abolished over the weekend.

The White House support for an armistice between labor and management came during the first post-election news conference when a reporter asked Mr. Truman whether he favored such suggestions.

OPA Staff To Be Trimmed

The President said it was just what he had been urging since August, 1945, when the war ended.

Porter, reached at his office while thousands of other government workers enjoyed the holiday, said he hoped to trim the OPA staff to about 12,000 by the end of this year.

This would compare with a wartime peak of 63,428 employes in July, 1945, and a staff of 34,700 last month before the recent series of sweeping decontrol actions.

OPA still must maintain rent ceilings in 650 rental areas throughout the nation and it also must continue price lids upon rice, sugar and syrups. The agency has a large number of violation cases to conclude and it also must complete an historical record of its five years of operations.

War Agencies May Be Merged

Many officials expect OPA, the Civilian Production Administration and other surviving war agencies to be lumped into a single agency. Porter said this action "has not been crystalized as yet" and probably would be decided by the Federal Budget Bureau.

The OPA chief also disclosed that eight regional heads knew as early as last Friday that most price controls would be lifted. Porter said he had outlined his recommendations to the President at a conference here of the regional chiefs and had coupled with his report an admonition to keep it secret until the White House had announced it. President Truman in his announcement credited Porter with suggesting the final sweeping removal of price ceilings.

Premier Of France May Be Communist

PARIS, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Communists emerged today as France's largest political party, on the basis of nearly complete returns from yesterday's elections, and thus paved the way for the possible naming of the first Comunist premier in the nation's history.

The voting was for deputies in the new National Assembly of the Fourth Republic.

The Communist advance, however, was accompanied by Socialist losses, and the combined leftist strength appeared weaker than at the time of the last national elections.

Maurice Thorez, Communist leader, was mentioned frequently in speculation over a new premier. The Communists were silent about their specific plans, but they were expected to reiterate previous demands for the premiership and one or more key ministries—foreign Affairs, Army or interior.

Returns were still trickling in slowly from French colonies, but the latest count showed that the Communists had captured about 29 per cent of the votes.

The centrist Popular Republican Movement (MRP) of President-Premier Georges Bidault, which had won the dominant position in the Constituent Assembly elections last June, dropped into second with about 26 per cent of the total.

Two Are Under Arrest In Baltimore Bombing

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11, (AP) — Two young men, sought in Baltimore, Md., in connection with the incendiary bomb explosion of a seaman's rooming house which killed six persons, were arrested by Philadelphia police today and held for arraignment.

Detective Glasgow Driscoll identified the two men, picked up at the request of Baltimore police, as Martin Bitkol, 25, and Kennon W. Langham, 22. They will be given a hearing tomorrow.

GOP's Leaders Agree To Work With President

Truman Acknowledges Situation "Threatens Serious Difficulties"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11, (AP)—President Truman delivered a conciliatory bid today for co-operation of the new GOP Congress and Republicans responded cordially although with qualifications.

Breaking his election silence with a policy statement to an Armistice Day news conference, Mr. Truman candidly acknowledged that "the present situation"—the legislative branch Republican and the executive branch Democratic for at least two years—"threatens serious difficulties."

But he said both are equally devoted "to the welfare of our nation" and when differences arise there must be no attempt on either side "to tamper with the public interest in order to achieve personal or partisan advantage."

"I shall co-operate in every proper manner with members of the Congress," he added, "and my hope and prayer is that this spirit of co-operation will be reciprocated."

Republican congressional leaders promptly and unanimously said they will co-operate—"co-operate to secure progress and security in the American way," added Rep. Martin (R-Mass), slated to be speaker of the House. Rep. Taber (R-NY), prospective chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, commented that "when the administration is doing something wrong I always have opposed it and will continue to oppose it." Sen. Brooks (R-Ill) said if Mr. Truman "wants to follow a really American policy he will get complete co-operation."

The reaction of B. Carroll Reece, GOP national chairman, was that "the people have spoken in unmistakable terms" and their "mandate" is binding upon the executive officials as well as the new congressmen.

The President laid much stress on the desirability of harmony and co-operation in the nation's foreign affairs.

"Our foreign policy has been developed and executed on a bi-partisan basis," he declared. "I have done my best to strengthen and extend this practice. Members of both parties in and out of the Congress have participated in the inner council in preparing, and in actually carrying out, the foreign policies of our government. It has been a national and not a party program. It will continue to be a national program insofar as the Secretary of State and I are concerned."

Then he went on to express concern "lest any in either party" should seek in the field of foreign affairs "an opportunity to achieve personal notoriety or partisan advantage by exploitation of the sensational or by the mere creation of controversy."

Reece interpreted that as a reference "to Henry A. Wallace, Sen. Claude Pepper (D-Fla) and other spokesmen for the Political Action Committee." Reece said "the description fits them perfectly."

King George To Be Heavily Guarded

LONDON, Nov. 11, (AP) — Military and civilian police mobilized tonight to guard King George VI from any conceivable terrorist attacks when he rides in prewar pomp and splendor tomorrow to open the second session of Parliament since the Labor Party came to power.

The precautions overshadowed the traditional King's speech, drafted by the Labor government and expected to blaze new trails of nationalization and endorse what the Labor Party has heretofore opposed —peacetime conscription.

From the time the King leaves Buckingham Palace at 10:30 a. m. (5:30 a. m. Eastern Standard Time) in the state coach until he reaches the Houses of Parliament, guards in and out of uniform will patrol the crowds with more than wartime vigilance.

Scotland Yard, commenting on reports that the Stern Gang or other Jewish underground organizations from Palestine had threatened the lives of leading British personalities, gave this reason for the added precautions.

Americans Pay Homage To Dead Of Two Conflicts

President Truman And Other Leaders Call For Lasting Peace

[By The Associated Press]

Americans around the world paid homage to the heroic dead of two world wars in Armistice Day observances yesterday in which President Truman and other leaders called for lasting peace.

Several speakers warned against complete disarmament and urged the nation not to reveal atom bomb secrets now nor weaken its defenses.

Mr. Truman, placing a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery, said in a brief talk:

"What we are trying to do now is to create a peace which will prevent the necessity of our grandchildren fighting a third world war for the same principles for which we stand now, and have always stood."

He said the welfare of the United States and of the world "are wrapped up in one package—peace."

Generals Ask Lasting Peace

At Frankfurt, Germany, Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, likewise calling for "accomplishment and preservation of a lasting peace," said past sacrifices will have been in vain "unless we of the occupation army meet our responsibilities today."

Gen. Mark W. Clark told his troops in Austria that sacrifices of the two world wars should be the "groundwork on which we build the bulwark of lasting peace for the entire world."

In France, school children placed flowers on graves of American soldiers at various battlefield cemeteries. Veterans of both wars joined the French in ceremonies at the Arch of Triumph in Paris where Georges Bidault, interim president of France, laid a wreath at the Grave of the Unknown Soldier.

Halsey Sounds Warning

Fleet Adm. William F. Halsey, speaking at Kansas City, warned against the "temptation of complete disarmament" and against "giving the atom bomb secret to someone else."

"We tried it (disarmament) once, and it didn't work," he said.

"Let us outlaw this atom bomb. But let's never make the mistake of giving the secret to someone else. It is safe in our hands."

Gen. George C. Kenny, head of the Strategic Air Command, declared in a St. Louis talk that the country's defenses are "in worse shape" than when Pearl Harbor was bombed. He called for unification of the armed services to remedy a "dangerous situation."

Pickle Packers In Pickle; Product Proves Puzzle

CHICAGO, Nov. 11 (AP)—The pickle packing people were in a pickle today trying to name a preserved cucumber that is not a pickle.

Normally, fresh cucumbers become pickled through a long process. This new variety requires only a few hours pasteurization in the bottle before it is ready to be eaten.

The National Association of Pickle Packers contends it is not a pickle because it has not been picked, neither is it a cucumber because it is no longer a fresh vegetable.

Man Declares He Rejected $20,000 Bid To Kill Ragen

Alabaman Declares Racing News Magnate's Death Due To Poison

CINCINNATI, Nov. 11 (AP)—Detective Chief Clem Merz said tonight Chicago police officials would come here immediately to question a man identified as Ivan Cannon, 34, Birmingham, Ala., who said, Merz reported, that he turned down a $20,000 offer to kill James Ragen, Chicago racing news magnate who died last summer.

Merz said that the man was arrested here driving an automobile reported stolen in Alabama and would be turned over to federal authorities for possible prosecution.

The detective chief quoted the Alabaman as saying Ragen's eventual death was due to poison administered by someone who was paid $50,000.

Gave Statement To FBI

Merz said the man also declared:

"The FBI agents came to my home in Birmingham and I gave them this entire statement. What they did with it I don't know."

Merz said that the man who claimed he had been a dealer in Chicago gambling houses for 10 years recounted:

"Two men approached me in a Chicago night club. They laid a sawed-off shotgun on a table together with $10,000 in cash for me to do the job. Another $10,000 was to be paid after the job was completed.

"One man was a Chicago club owner and the other a Chicago policeman.

"I turned it down.

Offered Him Auto And Driver

"They even said they had an automobile and a driver waiting for me. They figured they could trust me because I had worked so long for them.

"I'm not scared of any man walking but I didn't want the job. I was with a woman in Chicago and didn't want to mess myself up. She told me the next day about Ragen being shot and I pulled out. x x x

"The price on Ragen's life went to $50,000 when he survived the slugs. Despite the body guard around him they got by and gave him poison. I was told a man received $50,000 for this job."

Palestine Tossed Into Trusteeship Battle By Russia

Soviet Flays Britain, Blasts U. S. For "Contradictory" Views

LAKE SUCCESS, N Y, Nov 11 (AP) —Soviet Russia, in a long-awaited statement, roundly criticized Great Britain today for not offering a Palestine trusteeship agreement to the United Nations and simultaneously blasted the United States for holding "contradictory" views on trusteeships.

As Soviet Ambassador Nikolai V. Novikov finished his hour-long speech to the United Nations Trusteeship Committee, Great Britain, South Africa, and the United States immediately countered with off-the-floor statements denying the Russian allegations.

The United States flatly accused Russia of "constantly" preventing formation of a trusteeship council for the old League of Nations mandates.

South Africa rejected it as "a piece of crude propaganda intended to influence only the uninformed and unthinking."

Dulles Issues Statement

John Foster Dulles, New York lawyer, who was adviser on foreign affairs to Republican Nominee Thomas E. Dewey during the 1944 presidential campaign, and is the United States delegation expert on trusteeships, volunteered this statement to newsmen:

"The Soviet Union constantly complains that the trusteeship council has not been set up. Apparently it enjoys being able to make that complaint and to prolong that enjoyment for its acts constantly prevent the establishment of the council.

"At the London assembly it was the Soviet Union which prevented the establishment of the trusteeship council in provisional form. During the nine months between the London assembly and this assembly, it did nothing in relation to the draft trusteeship agreements submitted to it, whereas the United States worked actively and with much success upon this matter.

"Now the Soviet delegation is apparently unwilling to join with the United States and others in a prac-

Hopes Current U. N. Assembly Takes Action

Bevin Pledges British Support For Workable Disarmament Program

U. S. FOREIGN POLICY TO REMAIN UNCHANGED

Byrnes Declares Republican Victory Won't Alter Basis Of Policy

NEW YORK, Nov. 11 (AP)—Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, of Russia, openly warned tonight that an armament race already is underway, and called for a start at the current United Nations Assembly on a plan for reduction of arms.

His assertion came after Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin pledged British backing for disarmament if a workable world-wide plan can be found, and after Secretary of State James F. Byrnes gave his assurance that United States foreign policy would remain on a non-partisan basis.

Molotov expressed confidence that the Soviet proposal for arms reduction and the United States demand that it be safeguarded by a system of inspection can be harmonized.

He voiced his hope that a start on arms reduction could be made at this session of the Assembly in order to put an end to "the armaments race that has now started."

His comment came as the first official Russian reaction to the American arms control proposal. He did not specifically refer in detail either to his own advocacy of an arms cut nor did he define the American disarmament suggestion.

Address Press Association

For its part, Molotov said, the Russian delegation "is willing to meet the delegation of the United States on the issue."

"I hope," he added, "that we shall be able to come to grips with this problem."

Byrnes, Bevin and Russian Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov addressed the Foreign Press Association. Molotov told the organization that Russia wanted to see the rights of those who use and produce the world's wealth "protected in all parts of the world."

Swift on the heels of Bevin's pledge, Molotov called also for limitation of armaments, and declared that atomic energy "should be used for peaceful and not warlike purposes" under the authority of the United Nations.

Molotov declared that the United States and Russia should work to-

U. S. Orders Return Of Impounded Ships To Balkan Owners

NEW YORK, Nov. 11 (AP)—Secretary of State James F. Byrnes told the Council of Foreign Ministers today that the United States had ordered its occupation authorities to return to their Balkan owners all ships impounded by the United States Army on the Danube in the American occupation zone of Germany.

Seizure and retention of the ships, belonging to Yugoslavia, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Romania, long has been a point of contention between the Russian and American delegations in the council and was considered to have been one of the chief factors that colored the attitude of Premier Marshal Tito, of Yugoslavia, towards the United States.

Bridges Predicts "Rationed" U. S. Spending, Government Payroll Lids

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 (AP)—Sen. Styles Bridges (R-NH) forecast today that the new Republican-organized Congress will "ration" federal spending and put ceilings on government payrolls.

Bridges, in line to head the Senate's new streamlined appropriations committee, proposed also a change in the procedure under which testimony taken by the committee on proposed expenditures has largely been limited to officials of departments concerned.

"This time," he promised in a statement, "all evidence heard will not come from special pleaders who want more to spend. Those who want to reduce spending will have their day in court as well."

He said a new technical and professional staff provided under the Congressional Reorganization Act would be recruited and "used to the fullest possible extent to provide an accurate picture of our real needs as opposed to the ambitions of bureau chiefs and department executives."

The committee which Bridges will head when he takes over the chairmanship from Sen. Kenneth D. McKellar (D-Tenn) will be reduced in size from its present roster of 25 members to 21. Although most smaller committees will consist of seven Republicans and six Democrats, GOP leaders are likely to insist upon a 12 to 9 margin on this group.

Despite five vacancies on the present committee, that would force the retirement from the group of Sens. Burnet R. Maybank (D-SC) and Dennis Chavez (D-NM), the latest Democrats to join it, and would give the Republicans three additional appointments.

$42,000,000 Oil Storage Project

HONOLULU, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Navy spent $42,000,000 during the war to construct a huge secret oil storage system under Red Hill behind Pearl Harbor, it was disclosed today.

Sixteen men were killed and dozens were injured in burrowing into the lava heart of the hill. The work started in 1940 and was completed in 1943.

The story is told in David C. Woodbury's new book, "Builders For Battle."

Hardrock miners from Colorado, tunnel men from Montana, Idaho, and Nevada and coal miners from Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky labored on the projects along with more than 500 Americans of Japanese ancestry.

Twenty vertical concrete-lined tanks, each higher than a 20-story building, were dug beneath the hill. Each holds 250,000,000 gallons of fuel oil. These tanks, with 12 surface tanks, the Star Bulletin said, would hold enough to fuel the Pacific fleet for six years. It takes only 17 men to operate the system, the Navy said.

Searchers, Aided By Blimp, Find Bodies Of Woman And Her Kidnaper

MT. HOLY, N. J., Nov. 11 (AP)—Searchers in the desolate woodlands of Lebanon State Park followed radioed instructions from a Navy blimp circling overhead today and came upon the bodies of an ex-convict suitor and the soldier's wife he kidnaped from the bed of her husband 45 days ago.

The badly-decomposed bodies were sprawled on the edge of a swamp about 400 yards from the roadway where duck hunters had found the kidnap automobile yesterday.

The woman, Mrs. Mary Pyle Kimmey, 26-year-old wife of Sgt. Glynn F. Kimmey, of the United States Signal Corps at Fort Monmouth, N. J., wore the same red, black and yellow plaid skirt and red coat she hastily had donned the early morning of Sept. 27 when Chalmers Laubaugh, 35-year-old parolee from a prison near Washington, D. C., entered her bedroom and at gunpoint forced her to leave her husband's side and drive off with him.

State Police Capt. Walter J. Coughlin said the woman's body had been identified by her husband and by the Kimmey's landlady who came from Little Silver to the scene. Laubaugh's wallet was nearby and he was attired in the same blue shirt and blue trousers he wore the night of the kidnaping.

In a bag found at the scene was a picture of Sgt. and Mrs. Kimmey as well as Mrs. Kimmey's Social Security card, the FBI said.

Capt. Coughlin said the case appeared to be a "clear one of murder and suicide," but added that the inquiry would be continued. FBI Chief S. K. McKee said his inquiry was also underway.

PARIS, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Communists emerged today as France's largest political party, on the basis of nearly complete returns from yesterday's elections, and thus paved the way for the possible naming of the first Comunist premier in the nation's history.

The voting was for deputies in the new National Assembly of the Fourth Republic.

The Communist advance, however, was accompanied by Socialist losses, and the combined leftist strength appeared weaker than at the time of the last national elections.

Maurice Thorez, Communist leader, was mentioned frequently in speculation over a new premier. The Communists were silent about their specific plans, but they were expected to reiterate previous demands for the premiership and one or more key ministries—foreign Affairs, Army or interior.

Returns were still trickling in slowly from French colonies, but the latest count showed that the Communists had captured about 29 per cent of the votes.

The centrist Popular Republican Movement (MRP) of President-Premier Georges Bidault, which had won the dominant position in the Constituent Assembly elections last June, dropped into second with about 26 per cent of the total.

Two Are Under Arrest In Baltimore Bombing

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11, (AP) — Two young men, sought in Baltimore, Md., in connection with the incendiary bomb explosion of a seaman's rooming house which killed six persons, were arrested by Philadelphia police today and held for arraignment.

Detective Glasgow Driscoll identified the two men, picked up at the request of Baltimore police, as Martin Bitkoi, 25, and Kennon W. Langham, 22. They will be given a hearing tomorrow.

GOP's Leaders Agree To Work With President

Truman Acknowledges Situation "Threatens Serious Difficulties"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11, (AP)—President Truman delivered a conciliatory bid today for co-operation of the new GOP Congress and Republicans responded cordially although with qualifications.

Breaking his election silence with a policy statement to an Armistice Day news conference, Mr. Truman candidly acknowledged that "the present situation"—the legislative branch Republican and the executive branch Democratic for at least two years—"threatens serious difficulties."

But he said both are equally devoted "to the welfare of our nation" and when differences arise there must be no attempt on either side "to tamper with the public interest in order to achieve personal or partisan advantage."

"I shall co-operate in every proper manner with members of the Congress," he added, "and my hope and prayer is that this spirit of co-operation will be reciprocated."

Republican congressional leaders promptly and unanimously said they will co-operate—"co-operate to secure progress and security in the American way," added Rep. Martin (R-Mass), slated to be speaker of the House. Rep. Taber (R-NY), prospective chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, commented that "when the administration is doing something wrong I always have opposed it and will continue to oppose it." Sen. Brooks (R-Ill) said if Mr. Truman "wants to follow a really American policy he will get complete co-operation."

The reaction of B. Carroll Reece, GOP national chairman, was that "the people have spoken in unmistakable terms" and their "mandate" is binding upon the executive officials as well as the new congressmen.

The President laid much stress on the desirability of harmony and co-operation in the nation's foreign affairs.

"Our foreign policy has been developed and executed on a bi-partisan basis," he declared. "I have done my best to strengthen and extend this practice. Members of both parties in and out of the Congress have participated in the inner council in preparing, and in actually carrying out, the foreign policies of our government. It has been a national and not a party program. It will continue to be a national program insofar as the Secretary of State and I are concerned."

Then he went on to express concern "lest any in either party" should seek in the field of foreign affairs "an opportunity to achieve personal notoriety or partisan advantage by exploitation of the sensational or by the mere creation of controversy."

Reece interpreted that as a reference "to Henry A. Wallace, Sen. Claude Pepper (D-Fla) and other spokesmen for the Political Action Committee." Reece said "the description fits them perfectly."

King George To Be Heavily Guarded

LONDON, Nov. 11, (AP) — Military and civilian police mobilized tonight to guard King George VI from any conceivable terrorist attacks when he rides in prewar pomp and splendor tomorrow to open the second session of Parliament since the Labor Party came to power.

The precautions overshadowed the traditional King's speech, drafted by the Labor government and expected to blaze new trails of nationalization and endorse what the Labor Party has heretofore opposed —peacetime conscription.

From the time the King leaves Buckingham Palace at 10:30 a. m. (5:30 a. m. Eastern Standard Time) in the state coach until he reaches the Houses of Parliament, guards in and out of uniform will patrol the crowds with more than wartime vigilance.

Scotland Yard, commenting on reports that the Stern Gang or other Jewish underground organizations from Palestine had threatened the lives of leading British personalities, gave this reason for the added precautions.

Americans Pay Homage To Dead Of Two Conflicts

President Truman And Other Leaders Call For Lasting Peace

[By The Associated Press]

Americans around the world paid homage to the heroic dead of two world wars in Armistice Day observances yesterday in which President Truman and other leaders called for lasting peace.

Several speakers warned against complete disarmament and urged the nation not to reveal atom bomb secrets now nor weaken its defenses.

Mr. Truman, placing a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery, said in a brief talk:

"What we are trying to do now is to create a peace which will prevent the necessity of our grandchildren fighting a third world war for the same principles for which we stand now, and have always stood."

He said the welfare of the United States and of the world "are wrapped up in one package—peace."

Generals Ask Lasting Peace

At Frankfurt, Germany, Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, likewise calling for "accomplishment and preservation of a lasting peace," said past sacrifices will have been in vain "unless we of the occupation army meet our responsibilities today."

Gen. Mark W. Clark told his troops in Austria that sacrifices of the two world wars should be the "groundwork on which we build the bulwark of lasting peace for the entire world."

In France, school children placed flowers on graves of American soldiers at various battlefield cemeteries. Veterans of both wars joined the French in ceremonies at the Arch of Triumph in Paris where Georges Bidault, interim president of France, laid a wreath at the Grave of the Unknown Soldier.

Halsey Sounds Warning

Fleet Adm. William F. Halsey, speaking at Kansas City, warned against the "temptation of complete disarmament" and against "giving the atom bomb secret to someone else."

"We tried it (disarmament) once, and it didn't work," he said.

"Let us outlaw this atom bomb. But let's never make the mistake of giving the secret to someone else. It is safe in our hands."

Gen. George C. Kenny, head of the Strategic Air Command, declared in a St. Louis talk that the country's defenses are "in worse shape" than when Pearl Harbor was bombed. He called for unification of the armed services to remedy a "dangerous situation."

Pickle Packers In Pickle; Product Proves Puzzle

CHICAGO, Nov. 11 (AP)—The pickle packing people were in a pickle today trying to name a preserved cucumber that is not a pickle.

Normally, fresh cucumbers become pickled through a long process. This new variety requires only a few hours pasteurization in the bottle before it is ready to be eaten.

The National Association of Pickle Packers contends it is not a pickle because it has not been picked, neither is it a cucumber because it is no longer a fresh vegetable.

Man Declares He Rejected $20,000 Bid To Kill Ragen

Alabaman Declares Racing News Magnate's Death Due To Poison

CINCINNATI, Nov. 11 (AP)—Detective Chief Clem Merz said tonight Chicago police officials would come here immediately to question a man identified as Ivan Cannon, 34, Birmingham, Ala., who said, Merz reported, that he turned down a $20,000 offer to kill James Ragen, Chicago racing news magnate who died last summer.

Merz said that the man was arrested here driving an automobile reported stolen in Alabama and would be turned over to federal authorities for possible prosecution.

The detective chief quoted the Alabaman as saying Ragen's eventual death was due to poison administered by someone who was paid $50,000.

Gave Statement To FBI

Merz said the man also declared: "The FBI agents came to my home in Birmingham and I gave them this entire statement. What they did with it I don't know."

Merz said that the man who claimed he had been a dealer in Chicago gambling houses for 10 years recounted:

"Two men approached me in a Chicago night club. They laid a sawed-off shotgun on a table together with $10,000 in cash for me to do the job. Another $10,000 was to be paid after the job was completed.

"One man was a Chicago club owner and the other a Chicago policeman.

"I turned it down.

Offered Him Auto And Driver

"They even said they had an automobile and a driver waiting for me. They figured they could trust me because I had worked so long for them.

"I'm not scared of any man walking but I didn't want the job. I was with a woman in Chicago and didn't want to mess myself up. She told me the next day about Ragen being shot and I pulled out. x x x

"The price on Ragen's life went to $50,000 when he survived the slugs. Despite the body guard around him they got by and gave him poison. I was told a man received $50,000 for this job."

Palestine Tossed Into Trusteeship Battle By Russia

Soviet Flays Britain, Blasts U. S. For "Contradictory" Views

LAKE SUCCESS, N Y, Nov 11 (AP) —Soviet Russia, in a long-awaited statement, roundly criticized Great Britain today for not offering a Palestine trusteeship agreement to the United Nations and simultaneously blasted the United States for holding "contradictory" views on trusteeships.

As Soviet Ambassador Nikolai V. Novikov finished his hour-long speech to the United Nations Trusteeship Committee, Great Britain, South Africa, and the United States immediately countered with off-the-floor statements denying the Russian allegations.

The United States flatly accused Russia of "constantly" preventing formation of a trusteeship council for the old League of Nations mandates.

South Africa rejected it as "a piece of crude propaganda intended to influence only the uninformed and unthinking."

Dulles Issues Statement

John Foster Dulles, New York lawyer, who was adviser on foreign affairs to Republican Nominee Thomas E. Dewey during the 1944 presidential campaign, and is the United States delegation expert on trusteeships, volunteered this statement to newsmen:

"The Soviet Union constantly complains that the trusteeship council has not been set up. Apparently it enjoys being able to make that complaint and to prolong that enjoyment for its acts constantly prevent the establishment of the council.

"At the London assembly it was the Soviet Union which prevented the establishment of the trusteeship council in provisional form. During the nine months between the London assembly and this assembly, it did nothing in relation to the draft trusteeship agreements submitted to it, whereas the United States worked actively and with much success upon this matter.

"Now the Soviet delegation is apparently unwilling to join with the United States and others in a prac-

Bevin Pledges British Support For Workable Disarmament Program

U. S. FOREIGN POLICY TO REMAIN UNCHANGED

Byrnes Declares Republican Victory Won't Alter Basis Of Policy

NEW YORK, Nov. 11 (AP)—Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, of Russia, openly warned tonight that an armament race already is underway, and called for a start at the current United Nations Assembly on a plan for reduction of arms.

His assertion came after Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin pledged British backing for disarmament if a workable world-wide plan can be found, and after Secretary of State James F. Byrnes gave his assurance that United States foreign policy would remain on a non-partisan basis.

Molotov expressed confidence that the Soviet proposal for arms reduction and the United States demand that it be safeguarded by a system of inspection can be harmonized.

He voiced his hope that a start on arms reduction could be made at this session of the Assembly in order to put an end to "the armaments race that has now started."

His comment came as the first official Russian reaction to the American arms control proposal. He did not specifically refer in detail either to his own advocacy of an arms cut nor did he define the American disarmament suggestion.

Address Press Association

For its part, Molotov said, the Russian delegation "is willing to meet the delegation of the United States on the issue."

"I hope," he added, "that we shall be able to come to grips with this problem."

Byrnes, Bevin and Russian Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov addressed the Foreign Press Association. Molotov told the organization that Russia wanted to see the rights of those who use and produce the world's wealth "protected in all parts of the world."

Swift on the heels of Bevin's pledge, Molotov called also for limitation of armaments, and declared that atomic energy "should be used for peaceful and not warlike purposes" under the authority of the United Nations.

Molotov declared that the United States and Russia should work to-

U. S. Orders Return Of Impounded Ships To Balkan Owners

NEW YORK, Nov. 11 (AP)—Secretary of State James F. Byrnes told the Council of Foreign Ministers today that the United States had ordered its occupation authorities to return to their Balkan owners all ships impounded by the United States Army on the Danube in the American occupation zone of Germany.

Seizure and retention of the ships, belonging to Yugoslavia, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Bulgarfa and Romania, long has been a point of contention between the Russian and American delegations in the council and was considered to have been one of the chief factors that colored the attitude of Premier Marshal Tito, of Yugoslavia, towards the United States.

Bridges Predicts "Rationed" U. S. Spending, Government Payroll Lids

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 (AP)—Sen. Styles Bridges (R-NH) forecast today that the new Republican-organized Congress will "ration" federal spending and put ceilings on government payrolls.

Bridges, in line to head the Senate's new streamlined appropriations committee, proposed also a change in the procedure under which testimony taken by the committee on proposed expenditures has largely been limited to officials of departments concerned.

"This time," he promised in a statement, "all evidence heard will not come from special pleaders who want more to spend. Those who want to reduce spending will have their day in court as well."

He said a new technical and professional staff provided under the Congressional Reorganization Act would be recruited and "used to the fullest possible extent to provide an accurate picture of our real needs as opposed to the ambitions of bureau chiefs and department executives."

The committee which Bridges will head when he takes over the chairmanship from Sen. Kenneth D. McKellar (D-Tenn) will be reduced in size from its present roster of 25 members to 21. Although most smaller committees will consist of seven Republicans and six Democrats, GOP leaders are likely to insist upon a 12 to 9 margin on this group.

Despite five vacancies on the present committee, that would force the retirement from the group of Sens. Burnet R. Maybank (D-SC) and Dennis Chavez (D-NM), the latest Democrats to join it, and would give the Republicans three additional appointments.

$42,000,000 Oil Storage Project

HONOLULU, Nov. 11 (AP)—The Navy spent $42,000,000 during the war to construct a huge secret oil storage system under Red Hill behind Pearl Harbor, it was disclosed today.

Sixteen men were kiled and dozens were injured in burrowing into the lava heart of the hill. The work started in 1940 and was completed in 1943.

The story is told in David C. Woodbury's new book, "Builders For Battle."

Hardrock miners from Colorado, tunnel men from Montana, Idaho and Nevada and coal miners from Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky labored on the projects along with more than 500 Americans of Japanese ancestry.

Twenty vertical concrete-lined tanks, each higher than a 20-story building, were dug beneath the hill. Each holds 250,000,000 gallons of fuel oil. These tanks, with 12 surface tanks, the Star Bulletin said, would hold enough to fuel the Pacific fleet for six years. It takes only 17 men to operate the system, the Navy said.

Searchers, Aided By Blimp, Find Bodies Of Woman And Her Kidnaper

MT. HOLY, N. J., Nov. 11 (AP)—Searchers in the desolate woodlands of Lebanon State Park followed radioed instructions from a Navy blimp circling overhead today and came upon the bodies of an ex-convict suitor and the soldier's wife he kidnaped from the bed of her husband 45 days ago.

The badly-decomposed bodies were sprawled on the edge of a swamp about 400 yards from the roadway where duck hunters had found the kidnap automobile yesterday.

The woman, Mrs. Mary Pyle Kimmel, 26-year-old wife of Sgt. Glynn P. Kimmey, of the United States Signal Corps at Fort Monmouth, N. J., wore the same red, black and yellow plaid skirt and red coat she hastily had donned the early morning of Sept. 27 when Chalmers Laubaugh, 35-year-old parolee from a prison near Washington, D. C., entered her bedroom and at gunpoint forced her to leave her husband's side and drive off with him.

State Police Capt. Walter J. Coughlin said the woman's body had been identified by her husband and by the Kimmey's landlady who came from Little Silver to the scene. Laubaugh's wallet was nearby and he was attired in the same blue shirt and blue trousers he wore the night of the kidnaping.

In a bag found at the scene was a picture of Sgt. and Mrs. Kimmey as well as Mrs. Kimmey's Social Security card, the FBI said.

Capt. Coughlin said the case appeared to be a "clear one of murder and suicide," but added that the inquiry would be continued. FBI Chief S. K. McKee said his inquiry was also underway.

SHOULD WIVES HAVE SALARIES

So now she says—

SHOULD WIVES HAVE SALARIES?

And it has grown from blow to blow into a full grown row in her family. Says she—

"I figure I deserve a salary as much as my husband does.

"Yet all I receive is enough to cover the household expenses.

"He gets a ration—I get a portion. I don't think that's fair.

"I feel I should get a salary just as I did when I worked on the assembly line or in a store. I had my regular weekly envelope then and I think I should have it now.

"But he thinks otherwise.

"Don't you think that wives have any place in the industrial world? Shouldn't we have at least 50-50 of all the profit?"

I do, indeed, my dear.

I believe deeply that every wife should have her full share and more of the marital profit.

But just what is the marital profit?

Is it a matter simply of dollars and cents, or is there something infinitely more precious involved?

I think there is something much more precious involved. I have been mother and wife and I know that in my service there has been something far more than cash involved.

A street walker may take her gains in cash.

A wife takes her gains in a loving touch, a kindly smile, a gentle, understanding look. And unless she can find her profit in these things she should never be a wife.

Marriage is not a business.

Marriage is a spiritual companionship.

It is a hard and difficult companionship. It brings with it much pain and suffering but it repays in a closeness of the soul that we cannot otherwise know.

Wives deserve their full measure of the profit that marriage brings but they should also reckon in the intangible profit that marriage does not bring—those things which cannot be calculated in any bookkeeper's schedule.

If you cannot do that . . . if you cannot regard marriage in that way . . . you are not fit to be a wife. You should be a file clerk instead. For the things of the spirit are infinitely greater than the things of the flesh and unless you see that they are the real profit in life you know nothing of life.

Undying Beauty

Spending a weekend at a friend's home, a thousand miles from my own, I was intrigued by the beautiful planting about his place—a riot of color this beautiful Autmn. Everywhere there were groups of color, and not arranged formally, but everything in balanced form, so that as you walked about you were conscious of one who planted and so arranged his garden that his friends and guests would keep discovering new ideas.

Being an artist and a traveler to many interesting and historical places, my friend had placed mementoes all over his place—in statues, many of his own creation, in his outdoor fireplace, and hidden nooks, here and there. Here I have seen the personality of the friend and artist scattered all about his interesting country home. And in his house are treasures everywhere—old furniture beautifully restored, where necessary, and everything in perfect taste. Even the home is over a hundred years old, but marks of the beauty of that period remain substantially to this day.

It matters not where we view beauty, it always leaves something impressed upon our consciousness—something indelible and everlasting. In fact, there is a sense of undying beauty that remains with us forever, each new view of it, in any form, increasing the flow of appreciation in our minds. Beauty has an effect upon us that we all too often fail to note, or to realize. It does something vital and endless to us. Its influence even radiates, in turn, from us.

There is undoubtedly a spiritual significance to all beauty. That is why so much of it has been created everywhere. Even beauty that is hidden away, has its purpose. Perhaps it's only a "family affair" there, nevertheless it challenges our interest and imagination, wherever it has been placed.

You feel intimately connected with Nature every time you pluck a flower, or express wonder over some formation of the earth, or speculate as you view the stars. We know so little about the purpose of all beauty, but it must have been in the mind of the Creator t ohave it deeply impressed upon the consciousness of us all, else we would not love it so!

Lewis Might Price His Miners Right Out On Street

There is no law on the statute books to prevent John L. Lewis from staging strike after strike in support of his persistent demands for more money and shorter hours for his coal miners. But there is an unofficial law that may give him pause—the law of economics.

The Lewis theory is that the coal operators can afford to give a 25-cent-an-hour raise without increasing coal prices in exchange for a reduction in operating costs worked out by United Mine Workers experts. But that theory has not worked in other industries. The wave of postwar strikes has produced a corresponding wave of price increases. And spokesmen for the coal operators say it cannot and will not work in the coal industry.

One of the spokesmen is John D. Battle, executive secretary of the National Coal Association. Mr. Battle has this to say:

"John L. Lewis is going to price his boys right out on the street. The gas and oil people are stepping in and taking whatever business they want. The only thing stopping them is a little equipment."

We need look no farther than Allegany county to find the truth of this. During the past year hundreds of domestic consumers of coal have converted their heating plants to gas or oil, and hundreds more are clamoring for these services. The demand on manufacturers of equipment has been so great that it now is impossible to meet the call for gas and oil burners, while gas companies have had to call for a curtailment of installations until needed pipe is available to bring gas into the mains to feed the increased number of consumers who heretofore had depended on coal as fuel to heat homes and business places. This transformation is not confined alone to sections far removed from coal fields, but is true in mining towns where the supply of coal is right at their back doors, so to speak.

Mr. Battle, undoubtedly, is prejudiced in the matter, but that doesn't disprove he is right. If Mr. Lewis keeps on getting wage increases and the price of coal goes up so high that people cannot afford to use it, other fuels will take its place and miners may not be able to get work even if they want it.

This is a theory it might take years to substantiate, but it can hardly be dismissed as an impossibility in face of the current demand for means of using other fuels. It could be the possibility that might induce Mr. Lewis to modify his present policy of tossing wrenches from time to time into the gears of American industry.

If Dunninger read Hannegan's pre-election forecasts and was worried about possible competition, he can quiet his qualms.

Decline Of Machines Is Disclosed By Election

In appraising the results of the elections, one significant point which should not be overlooked is the terrible beating which has been administered to the big city machines. These machines—in New York City, Chicago, Kansas City, Boston and Hudson County, N. J., have been the core of Democratic strength in the North for sixteen years. In election after election they have piled up the votes which provided the margin of victory.

Now all five of these once powerful organizations lie badly shattered. The Kelly machine in Chicago, unbeatable in its prime, salvaged only a single office out of the landslide which swept over its Cook county stronghold. The Hague machine, which once ruled New Jersey politics, is reeling under the heaviest majorities ever administered by Republicans in that state. Although still strong in its home territory of Hudson county, its power has so declined that the Democrats managed to win only one major battle in the state, that for a state Senate seat.

Returns from other cities tell the same story of the decline of the machines. Senator-elect Lodge carried Boston by more than 17,000. In New York City Mead polled 850,000 votes, compared to the 1,180,000 ballots cast for Governor Dewey, although American Labor and Liberal Party votes, added to his total, carried the Democratic candidate to a meager 189,000 majority in the city. The Pendergast machine in Kansas City, rocked by the investigation of six years ago, reached its lowest ebb when it lost the key county jobs to Republicans and anti-machine Democrats.

It is perhaps too soon to sound the death-knell of these organizations. But it is certainly doubtful whether they can recover from their defeats in time to cut much ice in the 1948 presidential election.

If, as alleged, shoes may soon be made of sawdust, Junior will soon prove how impractical this idea is.

A "Must" Case

Shy $80,000 worth of jewels and without a job, the Duke of Windsor and the Duchess have arrived in the United States. They probably wonder why they thought going to England was such a good idea.

The fact that the Duke failed to land a job will not worry Americans as much as the fact he lost the jewels. The jewel theft tosses a case into the lap of Scotland Yard.

Americans have been taught that Scotland Yard never bungles a case. Whenever an American police department is stymied, it is said that if America had the English police system criminals would not do as they please.

If Scotland Yard falls down on the jewel case, an American belief is shattered. Those who believe in strict law and order will feel a distinct blow, for no longer will they have a model police agency in the world to which they can point in emphasizing that a police system can be pure and efficient.

The chances are that Scotland Yard will not fail. There are some crimes that simply must be solved. Now and then America has a crime that is so much in the public eye that its solution is necessary. The cops really get into action then and few such cases remain unsolved mysteries. An example is the effort put into the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

The Duke may not be popular with certain Englishmen—Attlee may have told him to stay out of England—but stealing from royalty is not ordinary theft. It is a foregone conclusion that somebody will be arrested.

A ROSY, FLAKY RASH

THE term pityairsis has been used by physicians for many years in describing a peculiar skin condition. All varieties of this disorder have a few general characteristics — namely, lesions which are covered by delicate, branny scales and the absence of any apparent sign of inflammation.

Pityriasis rosea, the most common of the group, is likely to affect younger individuals. The weather seems to play a role for, in the spring, it is observed more often when an early thaw occurs and less so when freezing persists.

The initial manifestation is a single blemish, about an inch in diameter, which is known as the "herald patch." The starter is a rosy, pimple-like affair which begins to fan out in all directions. As it grows, the center is clear, with a red bordered halo. Later the middle becomes fawn colored and displays fine, adherent scales. If the spot is compressed between the thumb and index finger it crinkles like a crumbled cigaret paper.

Up to now the victim is not concerned as he does not know what is about to happen. Within a week, somewhat similar eruptions suddenly appear all over the body. The trunk particularly is involved but spread below the elbows or knees is rare. The face, too, is usually spared. The disturbance is easily recognized because the long axis of the oval lesions seems to follow along the lines where the skin folds or wrinkles. A slight variation is seen occasionally in which the plaques remain small and fail to clear in the center. These are prone to assume a darker red shade and, were it not for the herald patch, diagnosis would be difficult.

Occasionally slight itching is exhibited and in some instances there is an associated feeling of fatigue, sore throat, headache, and enlargement of the glands of the neck, groin, and armpit.

The rash probably represents a feeble infection which is neither contagious, in the strict sense of the word, nor severe. The causative germ, however, has never been found. Th invader probably enters the system where the herald patch makes its appearance. Within a week the microbes have multiplid sufficiently to attack the remaining portions of the epidermis.

Practically every one recovers and a return bout is unusual. If left alone, the outbreak disappears spontaneously within six weeks to six months without leaving scars. On the other hand, when treated, it vanishes earlier.

Ultraviolet light will do the trick but the parts must be exposed to the point of redness. Within seven days the scales drop off and the eruption departs. Calamine lotion is used for itching but other ointments may have an adverse effect by increasing irritation. Sometimes the diet is important and by eliminating fish, hors d'oeuvres, strawberries, and excessive sweets, more rapid cure follows.

KNEE REFLEX

F. W. writes: What is revealed by the knee test for mental troubles?

REPLY

The reflexes have little to do with the mental condition unless there is organic disease of the brain. Tapping the knee affords a physician the opportunity to test nerve and muscle functions. Variations from the normal are not significant unless other symptoms are present to suggest an abnormality.

TRUTH SERUM

L. D. writes: What drugs are used in the truth serum?

REPLY

Hyoscine, scopolamine, and the barbiturates. These drugs do not actually make a person tell the truth. They cloud the foreconscious and, by relieving inhibitions, make the subject talk more freely. In this way, more information can be obtained. The situation can be compared to the babbling of an intoxicated person.

COMBINATION O. K.

Mr. M. writes: My husband, who has just returned from overseas, claims that putting milk in tea is poisonous. Please arbitrate as I do not agree.

REPLY

You are right. If your husband will consider the millions of persons who use milk in tea, he will see the point.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

NEW YORK CITY

Well, I finally got around to getting a glimpse of one of New York's most novel novelties.

It's an ice skating rink in the heart of the city, at Rockefeller Center.

It's a big frozen pond with restaurants on all sides so the onlookers can have lunch and watch the skaters at the same time.

It's a very impressive sight . . .

In fact, it reminds me of my living room floor on a January day!

And the local New Yorkers are quite proud of the project . . . but I don't understand why . . .

After all, what's ice anyway, just California fog with starch in it!

But ice skating is really a very interesting sport . . .

It's one of those things where you start at the bottom and stay there!

I had lunch in one of the grills and watched the skaters . . . I saw some beautiful figure eights . . .

Of course, I prefer them a little older!

The weather's been a little warm here, so they had some trouble freezing the pond.

But they finally worked out a way . . . they put Jimmy Byrnes on one side of it and Henry Wallace on the other and let the icy stares take it from there!

And Jane Russell came out to do a little skating . . . but they had to ask her to leave. . . .

The ice kept melting faster than they could freeze it!

THE NOISE IS LOTS BIGGER THAN THE BIRD

THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Truman's Ex-Naval Aide Seeks Naval Pension; Soviet Embassy Shunned by U. S. Brass Hats; Hermann Goering Laughed Until End

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 — The President's former Naval Aide, Commodore Jake Vardaman of Missouri, is up to his old tricks. Though elevated to a 14-year job at $15,000 a year on the Federal Reserve Board, highest fiscal agency in Government, Vardaman has been put back on active Navy duty and is trying to get disability retirement. This means that he may get a nice pension for life.

Vardaman has now gone out to Bethesda Naval Hospital for treatment and for appearance before a medical board, which apparently was why he was put back on active duty again. While on active duty he continues as a member of the Federal Reserve Board, though just how he manages this, no one seems to know.

If an officer on active duty is retired for disability, he then draws a pension equal to three-quarters of his base pay—for life. Furthermore he doesn't have to pay income taxes on this pension.

Thus, if Vardaman is retired for disability by the medical survey board, he will draw his $15,000 Federal Reserve Board salary for 14 years, and after that will get a pension of about $3,000.

When Vardaman first came to Washington for the hazardous duty of swimming in the White House pool and playing poker with other Missourians after sundown, he suddenly discovered that an officer attached to a yacht anchored in the Potomac could draw seagoing pay —or 10 per cent more. Immediately Vardaman rushed 'round to the Navy and got himself attached to the Presidential Yacht Williamsburg.

Actually he never slept on the yacht, except when cruising with the President over the weekend, but he got 10 per cent seagoing pay just the same.

Later Vardaman ordered several enlisted men to paint and repair his house in Georgetown—all at the taxpayers' expense. Their compensation was beer and sandwiches. This is the kind of economic expert now supposed to fix the nation's financial policy on the highest economic board in the USA.

Note to Senator Donnell of Missouri—Though the Navy doesn't particularly like Vardaman, they foxed you regarding his personal fitness record during your fight against his confirmation. The file containing Vardaman's record was taken out and never replaced during the Senate debate. For safekeeping he had it in his own desk.

Red Reception

The Russian Embassy trotted out Russia's second-best drawing card, Foreign Minister Molotov, for the annual reception celebrating the Soviet Revolution. Even his presence, however, failed to disguise the deterioration of Russian-American relations.

Significant was not who came, but who stayed away. For the first time since 1940, the bulk of the Cabinet was absent. So were most members of Congress, even those still in Washington. The Russians knew the freeze was on. For the first time in five years, they roped off the third and fourth floors of the Embassy, in previous years loaded down with choice viands, rare cuts of beef and free-flowing vodka. The crowd simply didn't show up. The Acting Secretary of State attended. So did the Undersecretary of Navy, so did fumbling Secretary of Treasury John Snyder, who loves a party no matter where it is. There were also a few brass hats, but the outpouring of top hats seen in former years failed to materialize.

Molotov's entire visit to Washington was a diplomatically correct, but cool performance. He was met at the station by Acting Secretary of State Acheson, visited the State Department for ten minutes, and spent ten minutes at the White House—just long enough to say hello and pose for photographers.

One Cabinet member who did show up at Molotov's party was Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman, ex-Ambassador to Moscow. Harriman recently was quoted as saying Russia and the U. S. couldn't live together, but he greeted Molotov in the back room of the Embassy with a forced smile.

"I see you've gone religious, Vyacheslav," Harriman joked.

"How do you mean?" Molotov asked.

"Going to St. Patrick's Cathedral for mass," Harriman explained.

"Oh," replied Molotov, "that wasn't I, that was Vishinsky."

Harriman then chatted briefly, assured Molotov the thumping GOP election triumph meant no change in American policy.

Molotov did not appear convinced.

Note—John L. Lewis, once a feature guest at Soviet receptions, this time was conspicuous by his absence.

Goering Humor

Just how big a last laugh Hermann Goering had on his executioners when he beat them to the hangman's noose is realized only by those who dealt with him during the Nuremberg trials.

During the trial, Goering frequently was handed documents to identify. When he returned these documents, he always removed the paper clips very carefully and then ceremoniously handed them to the interrogator.

"Here, you'd better keep these," he would say, "so they can't claim I'm saving material to commit suicide."

During one of the last interrogations of Hans Frank, Nazi Governor General of Poland, Frank was offered a cigaret by his cross examiner, who lit the cigaret for him with a lighter. Frank then asked the English word for lighter.

"You know," he added, "this is very interesting. I always like to learn a new word. One never knows if he won't have to use it in the next world."

Under The Dome

Speaker Sam Rayburn doesn't want the job of minority leader. Congressional colleagues are urging him to rally the Democratic minority in the House of Representatives, but Sam shies away . . . Southern Congressmen are not enthusiastic over continuing the leadership of Massachsetts' John McCormack and they have the votes to put him in or out. McCormack made a mistake by writing an enthusiastic letter of endorsement to Kentucky's Congressman May of Erie Basin scandal fame . . . Col. Bob Allen, who tells one of the truly great stories of the war, will speak tonight at the international dinner in Quincy, Mass., on "What Does The Future Hold For America?" . . . One fixture in the Capitol regardless of political turnover will be Rev. James Shera Montgomery, the House chaplain. Appointed by the Republicans in 1921, he was continued by the Democrats . . . Popular Bill Donaldson, superintendent of the press gallery, also will probably remain on the job regardless of politics. . . New job dispenser on the House side of Capitol Hill will be Republican Speaker Joe Martin . . . One Republican to whom the political change will make slight difference is able Congressman Dick Welch of California. Welch usually runs on both the Democratic and Republican tickets, was called upon for advice by FDR more frequently than any other Republican . . . Congressman Clarence Hancock of New York, probable new Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, is a descendant of John Hancock, first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

President Agrees With GOP On One Election Result

By MARK SULLIVAN

On one vital point, the election is read the same by the Republicans and by President Truman. Proof of this is in a remarkable similarity of authoritative statements.

Republican Senator Taft said last week "If the election was a mandate at all, it was a mandate against further government interference in the individual's life, the people directed the removal of controls . . ." Those were the words of Senator Taft. Words of President Truman are practically identical. The President said "The plain truth is that . . . price control has lost the popular support needed to make it work." This view Mr. Truman put into action within four days after the election. Excepting rents, sugar and rice, all controls over prices have been removed, and also over wages. As respects prices and wages, American citizens this week go to work under the same free economy that existed in 1941, before the war.

Fundamental Republican Doctrine

In ending price and wage controls, President Truman said "In short, the law of supply and demand operating in the marketplace will, from now on, serve the people better than would continued regulation of prices by the government."

That is fundamental Republican doctrine. It will be the Republican policy in the new Congress. From this doctrine will flow the steps taken by the Republicans in economic matters during the new Congress.

The prompt action of President Truman in conformity with the mandate of the election and the absence of any unwillingness on his part to conform with the policy of the party that now takes control in Congress, his freedom from personal pride of opinion or partisan contentiousness, is a sign of smoothness in the transition that must now take place.

It has been believed all along, with some evidence to support the belief, that President Truman savored early termination of controls as much as the Republicans; that his fight to retain them was in large part a deference to some within his Administration and to groups such as CIO and its Political Action Committee which was a spearhead in the fight for extension of the Office of Price Administration.

Concrete Result Of Election

Removal of controls is the first concrete result of the election. Further development of the new pattern must await the future. On Thursday this week the Republican steering committees of the Senate and House will meet. These are formal actions necessary as preparation for taking over the legislative machinery in January, selecting committee chairmen and the like. To a limited degree these meetings will lay out lines of policy and legislative action. At the same time informal talks take place daily among Republican leaders.

In the nature of things Republican policy will fall into categories. As respects foreign relations, there has already been cooperation between the Republicans and Democrats. There is no faintest reason to suppose there will be any departure from the broad lines of this cooperation. Continuation of the policy was affirmed last week by Senator Vandenberg of Michigan. He, in the new Republican regime, will have great power, not only in foreign relations but in all matters; and not dry because of his experience and the stature he has acquired, but because of the magnitude of the majority he received for re-election in his state last week, without entering the state to campaign.

GOP Aims To Balance Budget

In domestic matters, the most concrete policy of the Republicans is, to reduce Federal spending to a point where the budget can be balanced and, after that, reduce taxes. On this policy the leader will be Senator Taft, whose understanding of the subject and high sense of responsibility will avert any actions for mere political effect. On the central objective there is every reason to expect cooperation from the Democrats.

On domestic policies other than fiscal, a main problem will be labor legislation. As to this, there was cooperation between Republicans and regular Democrats in the recent Congress. The cooperation is likely to be increased in proportion as the regular Democrats have acquired ascendancy in their party as a result of the election. Just what the Republican policy on labor legislation will be in detail is still under discussion by party leaders, drinking cokes, playing cards, and singing.

And then the band struck up. It was playing an American tune, but without any real feeling for the American beat. I took a look at the musicians—they didn't look like any musicians I'd ever seen. Over the bandstand, in rhinestone letters, a banner announced "Teddy and his Rhythm-Makers."

"Not a bad orchestra," I said to the Red Cross lady who was showing me around. "Where do they come from?"

"From Dachau," she said. "We bring them down every night by truck."

"You mean these are SS men?" I said. "I don't see anybody guarding them."

"Oh, there's a guard," she replied. "He's probably downstairs having a drink. They're not going to run away. We give them extra rations."

"Do you think it's a good idea," I asked her, "to allow the Death Head Brigade to ingratiate themselves with these kids by playing dance music for them?"

"What's the difference?" she shrugged. "The war's over."

I sat there and watched Teddy and his sentimental gentlemen. Soldiers came up and asked for their favorite numbers. Teddy was gracious, smiled and played what he was asked to play. I got a mental image of the neat little business card in his pocket: "Teddy and his Rhythm-Makers. Soft Lights, Sweet Music and Torture."

At eleven, the band played "Auld Lang Syne" and put away its instruments. I went outside and watched the musicians pile into an Army truck. They were laughing as the truck pulled away in the direction of Dachau. I wondered what they were laughing at, what the joke was. And then I felt a little drop of ice water trickle down my spine. I knew what the joke was and who the joke was on. It was on the Red Cross, on the soldiers in the club, on you and me, and on the hundreds of thousands who had preceded the SS men at Dachau. "The war's over," I said to myself. "The war's over—but good!"

I wasn't much surprised at anything I saw in Germany after that. I wasn't surprised when we investigated the Nazis in public office with a whitewash brush in our hand. And I wasn't surprised when the Nuernberg Court looked at atrocity pictures for a year and then decided to hang only eleven of the twenty-one defendants.

Every so often I dream a strange dream. An orchestra is playing in a tremendous hall. The dancers are the people of the world, and they are dancing to whatever tune the band decides to play. Over the bandstand there's a great banner, and the rhinestone letters spell out "Teddy and his Rhythm-Makers". But the faces of the musicians are the faces of Von Papen, Schacht, Fritzsche, and their unhung friends. The music grows wilder and, as it changes from a two-step to a goose-step, the dancers struggle to keep time. The Red Cross lady beams approvingly. "The war's over," she says, and goes out to fix the sandwiches.

"Deadlock" Between Congress And Executive Branch Held Unlikely

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 — The talk of "stalemate" and "deadlock" in government as a result of last week's congressional election is perhaps natural, but it may be safely predicted that such a contingency will never materialize on any really important issues.

The executive and legislative branches of the government of the United States are more likely to cooperate and work together in the next two years than in any similar period in American history.

There is an inclination to draw parallels with other instances in which the Congress was dominated by one political party and the White House by the other. Differences there were and vetoes by the President, some of which were sustained and some overridden; but the words "deadlock" and "stalemate" are gross exaggeration.

Actually there is more unanimity in Congress today than there has been in the history of the present generation. For out of the 187 Democrats elected to the House of Representatives, 100 come from the South. This means that on issues that are vital and important to the nation, the Republicans with their 248 seats can pick up 42 or more votes from the Democratic side to get the necessary two-thirds to override a presidential veto, and enough votes on some occasions to offset any defections in Republican ranks.

In the Senate a Democratic-Republican coalition can likewise furnish the two-thirds vote to override a veto when the issue is clearly drawn and the people's wishes are rightly interpreted by the congressional majority.

Works Both Ways

It works both ways. If the President is right in his veto and the Republican majority is merely playing politics or trying to put the opponents in a hole on a piece of legislation which the country would not approve, the Democratic votes will not be forthcoming to override a veto.

On conservative and radical issues, however, the Congress will be able easily to muster more than a two-thirds vote. For the southern Democrats, though formally expressing disappointment over the outcome of last week's election in the north, are privately rejoicing. They knew that the CIO-PAC, if successful in its organizing drives in the south, would eventually unseat many of the present Democratic members of Congress.

The 1946 election was crucial. It marked a turning point for the South. And it may be assumed without question that a substantial number of southern Democrats will vote with their Republican colleagues from the North against any and all measures involving encouragement to labor union leaders to extend their political control over this country.

But there is another major reason why cooperation rather than deadlock between the executive and legislative branches of the government may be expected. It is because there is no personal antipathy to President Truman on Capitol Hill or anywhere else in the national capital. Mr. Truman's position on public questions is usually attributed to those mistaken advisers who told him to play ball with the left wing. It is assumed now that he will "see the light" and go along with the Liberals and Progressives in his own party rather than with the radicals of the Wallace-Pepper wing.

Wilson Bred Bitter Feeling

Back in 1918 when the Congress changed from the Democratic to the Republican Party, the bitterest kind of feeling prevailed against President Wilson. This unfortunately colored the League of Nations fight. Also Mr. Wilson had made the mistake of failing to cooperate with the Republicans in his selection of delegates to the Paris peace conference in 1918 and in the making of foreign policies. Mr. Truman has followed the right course and bi-partisan cooperation on foreign policy has been an outstanding success.

Mr. Truman knows Congress well and if he will be himself and not be influenced by left-wing radicals he will get more out of Capitol Hill in the next two years than he did in his first two years. If he does follow left-wing advice, he will find his vetoes overriden because the American people have voted into office more than two-thirds in both Houses who are anti-radical and anti-leftwing.

There will be no "deadlock." The people rule and happily the constitution did provide that Congress, when it musters a two-thirds vote of both Houses, is the government of the United States. That was the safeguard against deadlocks and arbitrariness of party or individual. The American people have spoken and their wishes in government will prevail. The future may be regarded with considerable optimism because the people have recaptured their own government.

PITCHING HORSESHOES by Billy Rose

I wasn't surprised when the Nuernberg Tribunal acquitted Schacht, Fritzsche and Von Papen. It won't surprise me if I hear they've been booked into Loew's State Theatre for $4,500 a week. After what I saw in Germany last November there isn't a surprise left in me. It gets down to this: In a shooting war, we walk off with the medals. In a thinking war, we wind up in the corner with a dunce cap.

Billy Rose

In October 1945, one of our generals in London asked me to take a look at our soldier entertainment in Germany and Austria. In Paris they gave me a beat-up Plymouth and a driver, and I set out on a tour which took me as far east as Vienna.

My first stop—and my first shock—was in Frankfurt. I walked into an officers' night club and heard a fat fraulein sing "My Blue Heaven." Her knockwurst accent, her leers and wiggles, turned this simple ditty into something obscene. I took a look at the German girls who were sitting around with American captains and lieutenants. I looked at thousands of such girls in Weisbaden, in Munich, in Heidelberg, in Nuernberg, in Salzburg. I think my show business background has taught me to recognize a pretty girl when I see one. I make the flat statement: I didn't see even a passably pretty girl in all of Germany. I saw fat legs, dumpy figures, cheap faces. Evidently you can't hate for ten years and stay pretty.

I have no quarrel with the GI away from home who wants to latch on to the first thing with skirts. But I have a hot quarrel with the brass who neglected to tell the kids what the was all about. A little more education might have kept some GIs from kissing people whose outstanding talent is a talent for murder.

I spent a bad 24 hours in Munich. In the afternoon I went to Dachau. Nineteen thousand Storm Troopers were being detained there. This former concentration camp was a nickel bus-ride from the center of town. When Germans in Munich told me they hadn't known what was happening in Dachau, I knew they were lying. On a still night they couldn't help hearing the screams. On a clear night they couldn't help seeing the glow of the ovens. I'll never forget that row of ovens, and the brass plates near the doors where the proud manufacturers had engarved names of their firms.

That night I made an inspection of half a dozen American entertainment centers. My last stop was the big Red Cross Club which played to something like 7,000 GIs a day. The great hall was crowded with soldiers

Lewis Might Price His Miners Right Out On Street

There is no law on the statute books to prevent John L. Lewis from staging strike after strike in support of his persistent demands for more money and shorter hours for his coal miners. But there is an unofficial law that may give him pause—the law of economics.

The Lewis theory is that the coal operators can afford to give a 25-cent-an-hour raise without increasing coal prices in exchange for a reduction in operating costs worked out by United Mine Workers experts. But that theory has not worked in other industries. The wave of postwar strikes has produced a corresponding wave of price increases. And spokesmen for the coal operators say it cannot and will not work in the coal industry.

One of the spokesmen is John D. Battle, executive secretary of the National Coal Association. Mr. Battle has this to say:

"John L. Lewis is going to price his boys right out on the street. The gas and oil people are stepping in and taking whatever business they want. The only thing stopping them is a little equipment."

We need look no farther than Allegany county to find the truth of this. During the past year hundreds of domestic consumers of coal have converted their heating plants to gas or oil, and hundreds more are clamoring for these services. The demand on manufacturers of equipment has been so great that it now is impossible to meet the call for gas and oil burners, while gas companies have had to call for a curtailment of installations until needed pipe is available to bring gas into the mains to feed the increased number of consumers who heretofore had depended on coal as fuel to heat homes and business places. This transformation is not confined alone to sections far removed from coal fields, but is true in mining towns where the supply of coal is right at their back doors, so to speak.

Mr. Battle, undoubtedly, is prejudiced in the matter, but that doesn't disprove he is right. If Mr. Lewis keeps on getting wage increases and the price of coal goes up so high that people cannot afford to use it, other fuels will take its place and miners may not be able to get work even if they want it.

This is a theory it might take years to substantiate, but it can hardly be dismissed as an impossibility in face of the current demand for means of using other fuels. It could be the possibility that might induce Mr. Lewis to modify his present policy of tossing wrenches from time to time into the gears of American industry.

If Dunninger read Hannegan's pre-election forecasts and was worried about possible competition, he can quiet his qualms.

Decline Of Machines Is Disclosed By Election

In appraising the results of the elections, one significant point which should not be overlooked is the terrible beating which has been administered to the big city machines. These machines—in New York City, Chicago, Kansas City, Boston and Hudson County, N. J., have been the core of Democratic strength in the North for sixteen years. In election after election they have piled up the votes which provided the margin of victory.

Now all five of these once powerful organizations lie badly shattered. The Kelly machine in Chicago, unbeatable in its prime, salvaged only a single office out of the landslide which swept over its Cook county stronghold. The Hague machine, which once ruled New Jersey politics, is reeling under the heaviest majorities ever administered by Republicans in that state. Although still strong in its home territory of Hudson county, its power has so declined that the Democrats managed to win only one major battle in the state, that for a state Senate seat.

Returns from other cities tell the same story of the decline of the machines. Senator-elect Lodge carried Boston by more than 17,000. In New York City Mead polled 850,000 votes, compared to the 1,180,000 ballots cast for Governor Dewey, although American Labor and Liberal Party votes, added to his total, carried the Democratic candidate to a meager 189,000 majority in the city. The Pendergast machine in Kansas City, rocked by the investigation of six years ago, reached its lowest ebb when it lost the key county jobs to Republicans and anti-machine Democrats.

It is perhaps too soon to sound the death-knell of these organizations. But it is certainly doubtful whether they can recover from their defeats in time to cut much ice in the 1948 presidential election.

If, as alleged, shoes may soon be made of sawdust, Junior will soon prove how impractical this idea is.

A "Must" Case

Shy $80,000 worth of jewels and without a job, the Duke of Windsor and the Duchess have arrived in the United States. They probably wonder why they thought going to England was such a good idea.

The fact that the Duke failed to land a job will not worry Americans as much as the fact he lost the jewels. The jewel theft tosses a case into the lap of Scotland Yard.

Americans have been taught that Scotland Yard never bungles a case. Whenever an American police department is stymied, it is said that if America had the English police system criminals would not do as they please.

If Scotland Yard falls down on the jewel case, an American belief is shattered. Those who believe in strict law and order will feel a distinct blow, for no longer will they have a model police agency in the world to which they can point in emphasizing that a police system can be pure and efficient.

The chances are that Scotland Yard will not fail. There are some crimes that simply must be solved. Now and then America has a crime that is so much in the public eye that its solution is necessary. The cops really get into action then and few such cases remain unsolved mysteries. An example is the effort put into the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

The Duke may not be popular with certain Englishmen—Attlee may have told him to stay out of England—but stealing from royalty is not ordinary theft. It is a foregone conclusion that somebody will be arrested.

These are prone to assume a darker red shade and, were it not for the herald patch, diagnosis would be difficult.

Occasionally slight itching is exhibited and in some instances there is an associated feeling of fatigue, sore throat, headache, and enlargement of the glands of the neck, groin, and armpit.

The rash probably represents a feeble infection which is neither contagious, in the strict sense of the word, nor severe. The causative germ, however, has never been found. Th invader probably enters the system where the herald patch makes its appearance. Within a week the microbes have multiplid sufficiently to attack the remaining portions of the epidermis.

Practically every one recovers and a return bout is unusual. If left alone, the outbreak disappears spontaneously within six weeks to six months without leaving scars. On the other hand, when treated, it vanishes earlier.

Ultraviolet light will do the trick but the parts must be exposed to the point of redness. Within seven days the scales drop off and the eruption departs. Calamine lotion is used for itching but other ointments may have an adverse effect by increasing irritation. Sometimes the diet is important and by eliminating fish, hors d'oeuvres, strawberries, and excessive sweets, more rapid cure follows.

KNEE REFLEX

F. W. writes: What is revealed by the knee test for mental troubles?

REPLY

The reflexes have little to do with the mental condition unless there is organic disease of the brain. Tapping the knee affords a physician the opportunity to test nerve and muscle functions. Variations from the normal are not significant unless other symptoms are present to suggest an abnormality.

TRUTH SERUM

L. D. writes: What drugs are used in the truth serum?

REPLY

Hyoscine, scopolamine, and the barbiturates. These drugs do not actually make a person tell the truth. They cloud the foreconscious and, by relieving inhibitions, make the subject talk more freely. In this way, more information can be obtained. The situation can be compared to the babbling of an intoxicated person.

COMBINATION O. K.

Mr. M. writes: My husband, who has just returned from overseas, claims that putting milk in tea is poisonous. Please arbitrate as I do not agree.

REPLY

You are right. If your husband will consider the millions of persons who use milk in tea, he will see the point.

It Says Here

NEW YORK CITY

Well, I finally got around to getting a glimpse of one of New York's most novel novelties.

It's an ice skating rink in the heart of the city, at Rockefeller Center.

It's a big frozen pond with restaurants on all sides so the onlookers can have lunch and watch the skaters at the same time.

It's a very impressive sight . . .

In fact, it reminds me of my living room floor on a January day!

And the local New Yorkers are quite proud of the project . . . but I don't understand why . . .

After all, what's ice anyway, just California fog with starch in it!

But ice skating is really a very interesting sport . . .

It's one of those things where you start at the bottom and stay there!

I had lunch in one of the grills and watched the skaters . . . I saw some beautiful figure eights . . .

Of course, I prefer them a little older!

The weather's been a little warm here, so they had some trouble freezing the pond.

But they finally worked out a way . . . they put Jimmy Byrnes on one side of it and Henry Wallace on the other and let the icy stares take it from there!

And Jane Russell came out to do a little skating . . . but they had to ask her to leave. . . .

The ice kept melting faster than they could freeze it!

THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Truman's Ex-Naval Aide Seeks Naval Pension; Soviet Embassy Shunned by U. S. Brass Hats; Hermann Goering Laughed Until End

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—The President's former Naval Aide, Commodore Jake Vardaman of Missouri, is up to his old tricks. Though evated to a 14-year job at $15,000 a year on the Federal Reserve Board, highest fiscal agency in Government, Vardaman has been put back on active Navy duty and is trying to get disability retirement. This means that he may get a nice pension for life.

Vardaman has now gone out to Bethesda Naval Hospital for treatment and for appearance before a medical board, which apparently was why he was put back on active duty again. While on active duty he continues as a member of the Federal Reserve Board, though just how he manages this, no one seems to know.

If an officer on active duty is retired for disability, he then draws a pension equal to three-quarters of his base pay—for life. Furthermore he doesn't have to pay income taxes on this pension.

Thus, if Vardaman is retired for disability by the medical survey board, he will draw his $15,000 Federal Reserve Board salary for 14 years, and after that will get a pension of about $3,000.

When Vardaman first came to Washington for the hazardous duty of swimming in the White House pool and playing poker with other Missourians after sundown, he suddenly discovered that an officer attached to a yacht anchored in the Potomac could draw seagoing pay —or 10 per cent more. Immediately Vardaman rushed 'round to the Navy and got himself attached to the Presidential Yacht Williamsburg.

Actually he never slept on the yacht, except when cruising with the President over the weekend, but he got 10 per cent seagoing pay just the same.

Later Vardaman ordered several enlisted men to paint and repair his house in Georgetown—all at the taxpayers' expense. Their compensation was beer and sandwiches. This is the kind of economic expert now supposed to fix the nation's financial policy on the highest economic board in the USA.

Note to Senator Donnell of Missouri—Though the Navy doesn't particularly like Vardaman, they foxed you regarding his personal fitness record during your fight against his confirmation. The file containing Vardaman's record was taken out and never replaced during the Senate debate. For safekeeping he had it in his own desk.

Red Reception

The Russian Embassy trotted out Russia's second-best drawing card, Foreign Minister Molotov, for the annual reception celebrating the Soviet Revolution. Even his presence, however, failed to disguise the deterioration of Russian-American relations.

Significant was not who came, but who stayed away. For the first time since 1940, the bulk of the Cabinet was absent. So were most members of Congress, even those still in Washington. The Russians knew the freeze was on. For the first time in five years, they roped off the third and fourth floors of the Embassy, in previous years loaded down with choice viands, rare cuts of beef and free-flowing vodka. The crowd simply didn't show up. The Acting Secretary of State attended. So did the Undersecretary of Navy, so did fumbling Secretary of Treasury John Snyder, who loves a party no matter where it is. There were also a few brass hats, but the outpouring of top hats seen in former years failed to materialize.

Molotov's entire visit to Washington was a diplomatically correct, but cool performance. He was met at the station by Acting Secretary of State Acheson, visited the State Department for ten minutes, and spent ten minutes at the White House—just long enough to say hello and pose for photographers.

One Cabinet member who did show up at Molotov's party was Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman, ex-Ambassador to Moscow. Harriman recently was quoted as saying Russia and the U. S. couldn't live together, but he greeted Molotov in the back room of the Embassy with a forced smile.

"I see you've gone religious, Vyacheslav," Harriman joked.

"How do you mean?" Molotov asked.

"Going to St. Patrick's Cathedral for mass," Harriman explained.

"Oh," replied Molotov, "that wasn't I, that was Vishinsky."

Harriman then chatted briefly, assured Molotov the thumping GOP election triumph meant no change in American policy.

Molotov did not appear convinced.

Note—John L. Lewis, once a feature guest at Soviet receptions, this time was conspicuous by his absence.

Goering Humor

Just how big a last laugh Hermann Goering had on his executioners when he beat them to the hangman's noose is realized only by those who dealt with him during the Nuremberg trials.

During the trial, Goering frequently was handed documents to identify. When he returned these documents, he always removed the paper clips very carefully and then ceremoniously handed them to the interrogator.

"Here, you'd better keep these," he would say, "so they can't claim I'm saving material to commit suicide."

During one of the last interrogations of Hans Frank, Nazi Governor General of Poland, Frank was offered a cigaret by his cross examiner, who lit the cigaret for him with a lighter. Frank then asked the English word for lighter.

"You know," he added, "this is very interesting. I always like to learn a new word. One never knows if he won't have to use it in the next world."

Under The Dome

Speaker Sam Rayburn doesn't want the job of minority leader. Congressional colleagues are urging him to rally the Democratic minority in the House of Representatives, but Sam shies away . . . Southern Congressmen are not enthusiastic over continuing the leadership of Massachsetts' John McCormack and they have the votes to put him in or out. McCormack made a mistake by writing an enthusiastic letter of endorsement to Kentucky's Congressman May of Erie Basin scandal fame . . . Col. Bob Allen, who tells one of the truly great stories of the war, will speak tonight at the international dinner in Quincy, Mass., on "What Does The Future Hold For America?" . . . One fixture in the Capitol regardless of political turnover will be Rev. James Shera Montgomery, the House chaplain. Appointed by the Republicans in 1921, he was continued by the Democrats . . . Popular Bill Donaldson, superintendent of the press gallery, also will probably remain on the job regardless of politics. . . New job dispenser on the House side of Capitol Hill will be Republican Speaker Joe Martin . . . One Republican to whom the political change will make slight difference is able Congressman Dick Welch of California. Welch usually runs on both the Democratic and Republican tickets, was called upon for advice by FDR more frequently than any other Republican . . . Congressman Clarence Hancock of New York, probable new Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, is a descendant of John Hancock, first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

President Agrees With GOP On One Election Result

By MARK SULLIVAN

On one vital point, the election is read the same by the Republicans and by President Truman. Proof of this is in a remarkable similarity of authoritative statements.

Republican Senator Taft said last week "If the election was a mandate at all, it was a mandate against further government interference in the individual's life, the people directed the removal of controls . . ." Those were the words of Senator Taft. Words of President Truman are practically identical. The President said "The plain truth is that . . . price control has lost the popular support needed to make it work." This view Mr. Truman put into action within four days after the election. Excepting rents, sugar and rice, all controls over prices have been removed, and also over wages. As respects prices and wages, American citizens this week go to work under the same free economy that existed in 1941, before the war.

Fundamental Republican Doctrine

In ending price and wage controls, President Truman said "In short, the law of supply and demand operating in the marketplace will, from now on, serve the people better than would continued regulation of prices by the government."

That is fundamental Republican doctrine. It will be the Republican policy in the new Congress. From this doctrine will flow the steps taken by the Republicans in economic matters during the new Congress.

The prompt action of President Truman in conformity with the mandate of the election and the absence of any unwillingness on his part to conform with the policy of the party that now takes control in Congress, his freedom from personal pride of opinion or partisan contentiousness, is a sign of smoothness in the transition that must now take place.

It has been believed all along, with some evidence to support the belief, that President Truman savored early termination of controls as much as the Republicans; that his fight to retain them was in large part a deference to some within his Administration and to groups such as CIO and its Political Action Committee which was a spearhead in the fight for extension of the Office of Price Administration.

Concrete Result Of Election

Removal of controls is the first concrete result of the election. Further development of the new pattern must await the future. On Thursday this week the Republican steering committees of the Senate and House will meet. These are formal actions necessary as preparation for taking over the legislative machinery in January, selecting committee chairmen and the like. To a limited degree these meetings will lay out lines of policy and legislative action. At the same time informal talks take place daily among Republican leaders.

In the nature of things Republican policy will fall into categories. As respects foreign relations, there has already been cooperation between the Republicans and Democrats. There is no faintest reason to suppose there will be any departure from the broad lines of this cooperation. Continuation of the policy was affirmed last week by Senator Vandenberg of Michigan. He, in the new Republican regime, will have great power, not only in foreign relations but in all matters; and not dry because of his experience and the stature he has acquired, but because of the magnitude of the majority he received for re-election in his state last week, without entering the state to campaign.

GOP Aims To Balance Budget

In domestic matters, the most concrete policy of the Republicans is, to reduce Federal spending to a point where the budget can be balanced and, after that, reduce taxes. On this policy the leader will be Senator Taft, whose understanding of the subject and high sense of responsibility will avert any actions for mere political effect. On the central objective there is every reason to expect cooperation from the Democrats.

On domestic policies other than fiscal, a main problem will be labor legislation. As to this, there was cooperation between Republicans and regular Democrats in the recent Congress. The cooperation is likely to be increased in proportion as the regular Democrats have acquired ascendancy in their party as a result of the election. Just what the Republican policy on labor legislation will be in detail is still under discussion by party leaders, drinking cokes, playing cards, and singing.

And then the band struck up. It

"Deadlock" Between Congress And Executive Branch Held Unlikely

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 — The talk of "stalemate" and "deadlock" in government as a result of last week's congressional election is perhaps natural, but it may be safely predicted that such a contingency will never materialize on any really important issues.

The executive and legislative branches of the government of the United States are more likely to cooperate and work together in the next two years than in any similar period in American history.

There is an inclination to draw parallels with other instances in which the Congress was dominated by one political party and the White House by the other. Differences there were and vetoes by the President, some of which were sustained and some overridden; but the words "deadlock" and "stalemate" are gross exaggeration.

Actually there is more unanimity in Congress today than there has been in the history of the present generation. For out of the 187 Democrats elected to the House of Representatives, 100 come from the South. This means that on issues that are vital and important to the nation, the Republicans with their 248 seats can pick up 42 or more votes from the Democratic side to get the necessary two-thirds to override a presidential veto, and enough votes on some occasions to offset any defections in Republican ranks.

In the Senate a Democratic-Republican coalition can likewise furnish the two-thirds vote to override a veto when the issue is clearly drawn and the people's wishes are rightly interpreted by the congressional majority.

Works Both Ways

It works both ways. If the President is right in his veto and the Republican majority is merely playing politics or trying to put the opponents in a hole on a piece of legislation which the country would not approve, the Democratic votes will not be forthcoming to override a veto.

On conservative and radical issues, however, the Congress will be able easily to muster more than a two-thirds vote. For the southern Democrats, though formally expressing disappointment over the outcome of last week's election in the north, are privately rejoicing. They knew that the CIO-PAC, if successful in its organizing drives in the south, would eventually unseat many of the present Democratic members of Congress.

The 1946 election was crucial. It marked a turning point for the South. And it may be assumed without question that a substantial number of southern Democrats will vote with their Republican colleagues from the North against any and all measures involving encouragement to labor union leaders to extend their political control over this country.

But there is another major reason why cooperation rather than deadlock between the executive and legislative branches of the government may be expected. It is because there is no personal antipathy to President Truman on Capitol Hill or anywhere else in the national capital. Mr. Truman's position on public questions is usually attributed to those mistaken advisers who told him to play ball with the left wing. It is assumed now that he will "see the light" and go along with the Liberals and Progressives in his own party rather than with the radicals of the Wallace-Pepper wing.

Wilson Bred Bitter Feeling

Back in 1918 when the Congress changed from the Democratic to the Republican Party, the bitterest kind of feeling prevailed against President Wilson. This unfortunately colored the League of Nations fight. Also Mr. Wilson had made the mistake of failing to cooperate with the Republicans in his selection of delegates to the Paris peace conference in 1918 and in the making of foreign policies. Mr. Truman has followed the right course and bi-partisan cooperation on foreign policy has been an outstanding success.

Mr. Truman knows Congress well and if he will be himself and not be influenced by left-wing radicals he will get more out of Capitol Hill in the next two years than he did in his first two years. If he does follow left-wing advice, he will find his vetoes overriden because the American people have voted into office more than two-thirds in both Houses who are anti-radical and anti-leftwing.

There will be no "deadlock." The people rule and happily the constitution did provide that Congress, when it musters a two-thirds vote of both Houses, is the government of the United States. That was the safeguard against deadlocks and arbitrariness of party or individual. The American people have spoken and their wishes in government will prevail. The future may be regarded with considerable optimism because the people have recaptured their own government.

PITCHING HORSESHOES by Billy Rose

I wasn't surprised when the Nuernberg Tribunal acquitted Schacht, Fritzsche and Von Papen. It won't surprise me if I hear they've been booked into Loew's State Theatre for $4,500 a week. After what I saw in Germany last November there isn't a surprise left in me. It gets down to this: In a shooting war, we walk off with the medals. In a thinking war, we wind up in the corner with a dunce cap.

Billy Rose

In October 1945, one of our generals in London asked me to take a look at our soldier entertainment in Germany and Austria. In Paris they gave me a beat-up Plymouth and a driver, and I set out on a tour which took me as far east as Vienna.

My first stop—and my first shock—was in Frankfurt. I walked into an officers' night club and heard a fat fraulein sing "My Blue Heaven." Her knockwurst accent, her leers and wiggles, turned this simple ditty into something obscene. I took a look at the German girls who were sitting around with American captains and lieutenants. I looked at thousands of such girls in Weisbaden, in Munich, in Heidelberg, in Nuernberg, in Salzburg. I think my show business background has taught me to recognize a pretty girl when I see one. I make the flat statement: I didn't see even a passably pretty girl in all of Germany. I saw fat legs, dumpy figures, cheap faces. Evidently you can't hate for ten years and stay pretty.

I have no quarrel with the GI away from home who wants to latch on to the first thing with skirts. But I have a hot quarrel with the brass who neglected to tell the kids what the was all about. A little more education might have kept some GIs from kissing people whose outstanding talent is a talent for murder.

I spent a bad 24 hours in Munich. In the afternoon I went to Dachau. Nineteen thousand Storm Troopers were being detained there. This former concentration camp was a nickel bus-ride from the center of town. When Germans in Munich told me they hadn't known what was happening in Dachau, I knew they were lying. On a still night they couldn't help hearing the screams. On a clear night they couldn't help seeing the glow of the ovens. I'll never forget that row of ovens, and the brass plates near the doors where the proud manufacturers had engarved names of their firms.

That night I made an inspection of half a dozen American entertainment centers. My last stop was the big Red Cross Club which played to something like 7,000 GIs a day. The great hall was crowded with soldiers was playing an American tune, but without any real feeling for the American beat. I took a look at the musicians—they didn't look like any musicians I'd ever seen. Over the bandstand, in rhinestone letters, a banner announced "Teddy and his Rhythm-Makers."

"Not a bad orchestra," I said to the Red Cross lady who was showing me around. "Where do they come from?"

"From Dachau," she said. "We bring them down every night by truck."

"You mean these are SS men?" I said. "I don't see anybody guarding them."

"Oh, there's a guard," she replied. "He's probably downstairs having a drink. They're not going to run away. We give them extra rations."

"Do you think it's a good idea," I asked her, "to allow the Death Head Brigade to ingratiate themselves with these kids by playing dance music for them?"

"What's the difference?" she shrugged, "The war's over."

I sat there and watched Teddy and his sentimental gentlemen. Soldiers came up and asked for their favorite numbers. Teddy was gracious, smiled and played what he was asked to play. I got a mental image of the neat little business card in his pocket: "Teddy and his Rhythm-Makers. Soft Lights, Sweet Music and Torture."

At eleven, the band played "Auld Lang Syne" and put away its instruments. I went outside and watched the musicians pile into an Army truck. They were laughing as the truck pulled away in the direction of Dachau. I wondered what they were laughing at, what the joke was. And then I felt a little drop of ice water trickle down my spine. I knew what the joke was and who the joke was on. It was on the Red Cross, on the soldiers in the club, on you and me, and on the hundreds of thousands who had preceded the SS men at Dachau. "The war's over," I said to myself. "The war's over—but good!"

I wasn't much surprised at anything I saw in Germany after that. I wasn't surprised when we investigated the Nazis in public office with a whitewash brush in our hand. And I wasn't surprised when the Nuernberg Court looked at atrocity pictures for a year and then decided to hang only eleven of the twenty-one defendants.

Every so often I dream a strange dream. An orchestra is playing in a tremendous hall. The dancers are the people of the world, and they are dancing to whatever tune the band decides to play. Over the bandstand there's a great banner, and the rhinestone letters spell out "Teddy and his Rhythm-Makers". But the faces of the musicians are the faces of Von Papen, Schacht, Fritzsche, and their unhung friends. The music grows wilder and, as it changes from a two-step to a goose-step, the dancers struggle to keep time. The Red Cross lady beams approvingly. "The war's over," she says, and goes out to fix the sandwiches.

DAV Estimates 1,382 Disabled GIs Here

There are approximately 1,382 disabled veterans of World War II in Cumberland, it is estimated by Lloyd F. Oleson, Ventura, Calif., national commander of the Disabled American Veterans organization.

Oleson based his estimate on the number of disabled veterans here on a per capita average that has been worked out by the DAV which is chartered by Congress as the official voice of America's wartime disabled.

The DAV maintains the largest staff of nationally paid service officers of any veterans' organization, Oleson asserted, adding that during the past 14 years 900,000 claims have been obtained and 160,000 medical examinations taken care of by the organization.

Car Used In Woman's Kidnaping Is Found

MT. HOLLY, N. J. Nov. 11 (AP)—A black sedan which state police said was used in the kidnaping of Mrs. Mary Kimmey six weeks ago was found Sunday in the Lebanon state forest.

Police began an intensive search through the surrounding woods on the possibility that the attractive 26-year-old woman might have been murdered.

The 1937 Ford sedan, found in the forest by a party of duck hunters, contained buttons from a woman's clothing and hair pins and a receipted repair bill which State Police Identification Expert Arthur Haussler said definitely linked it to Chalmers Laubaugh, an ex-convict named by the FBI as the alleged kidnaper.

WHY A SOAP SHORTAGE?

You've Heard Rumors. Here Are the Facts!

1. There is a world-wide shortage of animal fats and of vegetable oils. This shortage affects all of us. For instance, this year soapmakers have been able to obtain only one fifth of the imported oils they used in 1941—far less domestic fats, too.

2. Because of the world-wide shortage, manufacturers are unable to get the amount of fats and oils they need to make not only soaps, but also paints, textiles, tires, leather goods, floor coverings, electrical appliances, etc.

3. In the face of these conditions, American soap manufacturers have done their utmost. They have turned all the fats and oils they have been able to obtain into soap just as quickly as possible.

WHY A SOAP SHORTAGE?

You've Heard Rumors. Here Are the Facts!

1. There is a world-wide shortage of animal fats and of vegetable oils. This shortage affects all of us. For instance, this year soapmakers have been able to obtain only one fifth of the imported oils they used in 1941—far less domestic fats, too.

2. Because of the world-wide shortage, manufacturers are unable to get the amount of fats and oils they need to make not only soaps, but also paints, textiles, tires, leather goods, floor coverings, electrical appliances, etc.

3. In the face of these conditions, American soap manufacturers have done their utmost. They have turned all the fats and oils they have been able to obtain into soap just as quickly as possible.

4. But for the help of American housewives, the shortage of soap would have been far more serious. Last year, more than one out of every nine packages of soap sold was made from used fats saved in America's kitchens.

5. Don't blame your grocer. He is doing his best, like the soapmakers, to get more soap for you. Won't you do your best by saving and turning in every drop of used fats.

Gas Company

alone, the Bureau of Mines estimates that one billion cubic feet of gas, equivalent to 150,000 barrels of oil are wasted every day.

There has been some talk of using the Big Inch and Little Inch pipe lines in transporting natural gas. These two high transmission systems, installed during the war to pipe oil from the Texas fields to New Jersey, were laid by the government as an emergency project.

At present time, they are idle, although the oil companies as well as gas companies have submitted bids to the government for purchasing both lines. The Big Inch is a 24-inch main, first installed and later augmented by the 21-inch Little Inch line which parallels it. The lines run within about 10 miles of this city.

See Political Pressure

Best informed sources see some political maneuvering and pressure groups at work on government officials, regarding the sale of Big and Little Inch. Combined gase companies have offered the government, it is claimed between 80 to 100 million dollars cash for the lines, while oil combines have said to have bid between 20 to 30 million dollars if Uncle Sam will lend them what they need at negligible rates of interest.

There is a suspicion in some quarters that there is a desire to sell to the oil combine, although there are many people in high places who believe the lines should go to the gas company.

If the gas combine could acquire the lines, the supply of gas to market would be sufficient, and much of the gas now being wasted would be put to use, gas company officials argue.

In published advertisements, gas companies in the east, are asking people to wait before converting to home gas heating, and the ads attempt to explain why.

Some neighborhood lines are already overloaded, and 71 gas tanks of 30,000 gallons capacity each have been installed to be filled with propane, (liquid petroleum gas), which can be blended into natural gas mains to augment the supply. This supply, however is for emergency use and extremely cold weather only.

Company Ready To Expand

Gas company officials say that the local company together with their affiliates are prepared to spend 50 million dollars to improve and augment facilities, in order to bring more gas into marketable areas from West Virginia, Texas and other gas fields. Because of a dire shortage of necessary materials and skilled manpower, only a fraction of this amount will be spent this year, it is claimed.

Curtailment in industrial use of gas is also foreseen as a possibility, in the event of extremely cold weather, as gas company officials put home-heating and individual consumer use first. To offset this, and to serve what is already installed, no additional units are to be installed.

Just how long this condition will last is not generally known and depends entirely upon the supply of material and labor available, unless there is some speedy action on Big Inch and Little Inch, so the gas companies may acquire them.

In the meantime, local officials believe it will be at least 18 months before local householders, tired of shoveling coal at present coal prices can enjoy automatic gas heat.

Potomac Park Officers Will Be Installed

Newly elected officers of the Potomac Park Improvement Association will be installed tonight at 7:30 at the United Brethren Community Church.

Following the installation of officers a representative of the Potomac Edison Company will report on the street lighting program. A permanent site for the veterans honor roll will also be approved.

Officers to be installed are J. Milton Dick, president; Edward Shaffer, vice president; Mrs. William Thomas, secretary; Charles Pfeiffer, treasurer, and R. H. Kaske, recording secretary.

tical procedure designed to make speed by waiving, without prejudice, possible claims to be formal parties to the draft agreements to be submitted to the Assembly. It prefers to enter into what Congressman (Sol) Bloom (D-NY) and I described last Monday as a legal morass which will jeopardize the establishment of the trusteeship system."

Other Developments

The flaring battle over trusteeships was one of a series of prime developments as the Assembly, now some days behind schedule, plunged into a week of committee work with almost no observance of Armistice Day. These developments included:

1. F. H. LaGuardia, director-general of UNNRA, recommended to the United Nations establishment of a $400,000,000 fund to prevent "starvation" in Europe. LaGuardia's prepared text had contained some questions on the United States policy on international relief but he omitted them in oral delivery.

2. The British delegation backed the choice of Westchester county, N. Y., for a permanent home for the United Nations as the Headquarters Committee began work on its widened task. Failing that, Britain said it favored a site on the East coast of the United States, including areas within one hour and half traveling distance from Philadelphia and Boston.

Hopes Current

gether to accomplish reduction of armaments. The spokesman for the country with the world's largest armed force said that steps should be taken to reduce the number of men serving in armies, navies and air forces.

Minutes earlier, Bevin had declared that there need be no fear that Britain would lag in such a reduction. But he made it plain that Britain would not take such a step unless and until assured that a cutting down of armaments can be achieved on a universal basis.

All Three Caution Press

All three of the council members interrupting their momentous deliberations on peace pacts for the Axis satellites, cautioned the press on its responsibilities in reporting and interpreting the progress in the world's quest for a lasting peace. And all three expressed their confidence in progress toward the objective, while conceding that the task will be long and hard.

In the midst of widespread speculation among diplomats here for the United Nations Assembly over the post-election foreign policy of the United States, Byrnes used the occasion to assert firmly that the Republican victory would bring no change.

He called for a "people's peace," and declared that the American people know "that in this interdependent world there must be peace for all or there will be peace for none."

"The American people voted for a change in the control of Congress," he told the Foreign Press Association. "They did not vote for a change in foreign policy. Our foreign policy is not a Democrat or Republican policy. It is an American policy."

Santa's Toy Supply

toys, like the jumping jack and writing and turning clowns, that perform for hours after being wound up.

Play suits, such as cowboy, and Indian uniforms are still missing from the market, Merchants claim the material shortage is the reason for this scarcity.

One of the city's leading toy centers reported yesterday that while stocks are more complete than at any time in the past five years, the usually early Christmas buying is far from what was expected. "People seem to be waiting for prices to drop some," the dealer said, but added that most of the Christmas stocks are now on display and prices will probably remain about the same.

One of the biggest attractions this year is the aeronautic euipment on display, the toy salesmen reported. Children of school age are showing a great interest in airplanes and motors. . . girls as well as boys.

In the athletic department, footballs, basketballs and boxing gloves, all scarce during the war, are beginning to reappear, but there still isn't enough to meet the demand. Baseball equipment is much more plentiful, but not so much in demand.

Not Many Trains

"Electric trains and wagons, are almost out of the question," a toy dealer said. In the past six months, he asserted, he has had one dozen trains and about as many wagons. "They are grabbed even before we get them uncrated," he explained. The prices on the trains range from $29 for a small set to about $50 for an ultra modern train complete with whistle and a "smoking smoke stack."

Musical instruments, like the toy piano, are of much better quality, the salesmen said, and the tunes of the sets are much more pleasant. Most of the games are on pasteboard backings, but deal with very modern subjects both in the athletic department and educational material.

The infant's toys, . . .teddy bears, rattles and plastic things are both cheap and plentiful, dealers said. As for any thing new in the way of toys or amusement sets, the counters are empty. Most manufacturing companies are sticking to old and proven types. One change noted on all counters is the absence of military toys and uniforms. "They're just not wanted anymore," the dealers reported.

There is little doubt in the minds of local merchants, about what kind of Christmas it will be for the children. "There are lots of toys, and all kinds, it's just the few standards, that are going to be missing," is the way they describe it.

Man Who Threatens Family Is Arrested

Charles Emerick, 45, Ellerslie, is being held in city jail after "creating a disturbance" and threatening to commit suicide at his home last night, Maryland State Police said.

Emerick, according to Trooper Harry Holsinger, who made the arrest, threatened to harm his family and brother-in-law, and then placed a knife to his throat and said he was going to kill himself.

He was arrested on a warrant sworn out by his wife and will be taken before the States Attorney this morning.

Eearl O'Neill, 23 Virginia avenue, was arrested last night on a drunk and disorderly conduct charge after his mother complained to police. Officer John Powers and John W. Snyder made the arrest.

Windows should be safely screened or barred to prevent children from falling through.

alone, the Bureau of Mines estimates that one billion cubic feet of gas, equivalent to 150,000 barrels of oil are wasted every day.

There has been some talk of using the Big Inch and Little Inch pipe lines in transporting natural gas. These two high transmission systems, installed during the war to pipe oil from the Texas fields to New Jersey, were laid by the government as an emergency project.

At present time, they are idle, although the oil companies as well as gas companies have submitted bids to the government for purchasing both lines. The Big Inch is a 24-inch main, first installed and later augmented by the 21-inch Little Inch line which parallels it. The lines run within about 10 miles of this city.

See Political Pressure

Best informed sources see some political maneuvering and pressure groups at work on government officials, regarding the sale of Big and Little Inch. Combined gase companies have offered the government, it is claimed between 80 to 100 million dollars cash for the lines, while oil combines have said to have bid between 20 to 30 million dollars if Uncle Sam will lend them what they need at negligible rates of interest.

There is a suspicion in some quarters that there is a desire to sell to the oil combine, although there are many people in high places who believe the lines should go to the gas company.

If the gas combine could acquire the lines, the supply of gas to market would be sufficient, and much of the gas now being wasted would be put to use, gas company officials argue.

In published advertisements, gas companies in the east, are asking people to wait before converting to home gas heating, and the ads attempt to explain why.

Some neighborhood lines are already overloaded, and 71 gas tanks of 30,000 gallons capacity each have been installed to be filled with propane, liquid petroleum gas), which can be blended into natural gas mains to augment the supply. This supply, however is for emergency use and extremely cold weather only.

Company Ready To Expand

Gas company officials say that the local company together with their affiliates are prepared to spend 50 million dollars to improve and augment facilities, in order to bring more gas into marketable areas from West Virginia, Texas and other gas fields. Because of a dire shortage of necessary materials and skilled manpower, only a fraction of this amount will be spent this year, it is claimed.

Curtailment in industrial use of gas is also foreseen as a possibility, in the event of extremely cold weather, as gas company officials put home-heating and individual consumer use first. To offset this, and to serve what is already installed, no additional units are to be installed.

Just how long this condition will last is not generally known and depends entirely upon the supply of material and labor available, unless there is some speedy action on Big Inch and Little Inch, so the gas companies may acquire them.

In the meantime, local officials believe it will be at least 18 months before local householders, tired of shoveling coal at present coal prices can enjoy automatic gas heat.

Potomac Park Officers Will Be Installed

Newly elected officers of the Potomac Park Improvement Association will be installed tonight at 7:30 at the United Brethren Community Church.

Following the installation of officers a representative of the Potomac Edison Company will report on the street lighting program. A permanent site for the veterans honor roll will also be approved.

Officers to be installed are J. Milton Dick, president; Edward Shaffer, vice president; Mrs. William Thomas, secretary; Charles Pfeiffer, treasurer, and R. H. Kaske, recording secretary.

tical procedure designed to make speed by waiving, without prejudice, possible claims to be formal parties to the draft agreements to be submitted to the Assembly. It prefers to enter into what Congressman (Sol) Bloom (D-NY) and I described last Monday as a legal morass which will jeopardize the establishment of the trusteeship system."

Other Developments

The flaring battle over trusteeships was one of a series of prime developments as the Assembly, now some days behind schedule, plunged into a week of committee work with almost no observance of Armistice Day. These developments included:

1. F. H. LaGuardia, director-general of UNNRA, recommended to the United Nations establishment of a $400,000,000 fund to prevent "starvation" in Europe. LaGuardia's prepared text had contained some questions on the United States policy on international relief but he omitted them in oral delivery.

2. The British delegation backed the choice of Westchester county, N. Y., for a permanent home for the United Nations as the Headquarters Committee began work on its widened task. Failing that, Britain said it favored a site on the East coast of the United States, including areas within one hour and half traveling distance from Philadelphia and Boston.

Hopes Current

gether to accomplish reduction of armaments. The spokesman for the country with the world's largest armed force said that steps should be taken to reduce the number of men serving in armies, navies and air forces.

Minutes earlier, Bevin had declared that there need be no fear that Britain would lag in such a reduction. But he made it plain that Britain would not take such a step unless and until assured that a cutting down of armaments can be achieved on a universal basis.

All Three Caution Press

All three of the council members interrupting their momentous deliberations on peace pacts for the Axis satellites, cautioned the press on its responsibilities in reporting and interpreting the progress in the world's quest for a lasting peace. And all three expressed their confidence in progress toward the objective, while conceding that the task will be long and hard.

In the midst of widespread speculation among diplomats here for the United Nations Assembly over the post-election foreign policy of the United States, Byrnes used the occasion to assert firmly that the Republican victory would bring no change.

He called for a "people's peace," and declared that the American people know "that in this interdependent world there must be peace for all or there will be peace for none."

"The American people voted for a change in the control of Congress," he told the Foreign Press Association. "They did not vote for a change in foreign policy. Our foreign policy is not a Democrat or Republican policy. It is an American policy."

Santa's Toy Supply

toys, like the jumping jack and writing and turning clowns, that perform for hours after being wound up.

Play suits, such as cowboy, and Indian uniforms are still missing from the market. Merchants claim the material shortage is the reason for this scarcity.

One of the city's leading toy centers reported yesterday that while stocks are more complete than at any time in the past five years, the usually early Christmas buying is far from what was expected. "People seem to be waiting for prices to drop some," the dealer said, but added that most of the Christmas stocks are now on display and prices will probably remain about the same.

One of the biggest attractions this year is the aeronautic euipment on display, the toy salesmen reported. Children of school age are showing a great interest in airplanes and motors. . . girls as well as boys.

In the athletic department, footballs, basketballs and boxing gloves, all scarce during the war, are beginning to reappear, but there still isn't enough to meet the demand. Baseball equipment is much more plentiful, but not so much in demand.

Not Many Trains

"Electric trains and wagons, are almost out of the question," a toy dealer said. In the past six months, he asserted, he has had one dozen trains and about as many wagons. "They are grabbed even before we get them uncrated," he explained. The prices on the trains range from $29 for a small set to about $50 for an ultra modern train complete with whistle and a "smoking smoke stack."

Musical instruments, like the toy piano, are of much better quality, the salesmen said, and the tunes of the sets are much more pleasant. Most of the games are on pasteboard backings, but deal with very modern subjects both in the athletic department and educational material.

The infant's toys, . . .teddy bears, rattles and plastic things are both cheap and plentiful, dealers said. As for any thing new in the way of toys or amusement sets, the counters are empty. Most manufacturing companies are sticking to old and proven types. One change noted on all counters is the absence of military toys and uniforms. "They're just not wanted anymore," the dealers reported.

There is little doubt in the minds of local merchants, about what kind of Christmas it will be for the children. "There are lots of toys, and all kinds, it's just the few standards, that are going to be missing," is the way they describe it.

Man Who Threatens Family Is Arrested

Charles Emerick, 45, Ellerslie, is being held in city jail after "creating a disturbance" and threatening to commit suicide at his home last night, Maryland State Police said.

Emerick, according to Trooper Harry Holsinger, who made the arrest, threatened to harm his family and brother-in-law, and then placed a knife to his throat and said he was going to kill himself.

He was arrested on a warrant sworn out by his wife and will be taken before the States Attorney this morning.

Eearl O'Neill, 23 Virginia avenue, was arrested last night on a drunk and disorderly conduct charge after his mother complained to police. Officer John Powers and John W. Snyder made the arrest.

Windows should be safely screened or barred to prevent children from falling through.

Crowell And Klosterman Win Legion Fights

Wentz Defeated By Capital City Lightweight Ace

Jim Klosterman Cops 7th In Row; Santley, Niland, Depan, Porter Win

Johnny Crowell, hard-hitting lightweight of the Southwest Athletic Club, Washington, D. C., snapped the 11-bout winning streak of Al Wentz, of the Keystate Athletic Club, Johnstown, Pa., and lanky Jack Klosterman, Cumberland's southpaw welterweight, marked up his seventh straight ring triumph in two seasons at the expense of Ed Tawney, of Washington, D. C., in the top bouts of the amateur boxing show staged last night at the state armory by Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion.

Approximately 500 paying patrons turned out for the Armistice Day fistic program and witnessed a nine-bout card that was packed with action from start to finish. It was the second show of the season staged by the Legion and Matchmaker Robert V. "Sparky" Crisholm.

Jack Wins Third Here

Crowell, who defeated Jimmie Catanese and Vance Sinclair, the Zan A. C. ace, from Morgantown, W. Va., in previous appearances here, made it three wins in a row in Legion shows by decisioning Wentz, the "Fighting High School Boy" from Johnstown in the ninth and final match on the card.

Wentz, a victor over Jack Jones, of this city, via a knockout in his first showing here last month, started out in whirlwind fashion, swarming all over Crowell with a two-fisted attack in the opening round but apparently spent himself. He hit the deck twice in the second round for one and seven counts from hard right-hand smashes to the jaw, was staggered with another right to the head as the third round opened but he managed to regain his bearings and turned the battle into a rousing finish.

Wentz Floored Twice

The knockdowns counted heavily against Wentz and his punches lacked steam as he courageously tried to pull the battle out of the fire in the final stanza. The first time Al went down he fell flat on his face but was up at the count of one. The second time he hit the resin he landed on his back and rested until Referee Jim Kelley reached the count of seven before arising and renewing hostilities.

Crowell was given the decision on a 2-1 vote, one of the judges casting his ballot for the Johnstown lad.

The Klosterman-Tawney affair was a jaw-punching contest from opening to closing gong and was not decided until the final round when "Big Jim" right-jabbed and left crossed and hooked his way to a clean-cut victory. Jim held a 2-1 edge in the voting at the close of the battle, one of the judges favoring Tawney.

It was a bitter struggle between a pair of hard-socking welterweights and it was anybody's fight until the local southpaw fired his big guns in the closing heat.

The seventh bout on the card was a bad one. In fact it was so smelly that one of the judges marked "no contest" on his ballot. It was between two colored middleweights, Ben Paugh and Bill Mann, and there wasn't a solid punch landed. Referee Kelley urged the boys to mix it but they slapped and clowned about for three rounds. Mann got a 2-0 decision at the finish.

Niland Decisions Mason

Joe Niland flashed his best fighting form in many moons to earn the decision over Johnny Mason, a tinie welterweight from Washington, D. C., in the sixth match. After Joe hit Mason on the chin with that looping left in the first round the Capital City boy stayed on the defensive a greater part of the second and third stanzas. The decision, which was unanimous, was roundly booed, but there was no doubt about Niland winning that one. It's an old Spanish custom to boo the Nilands whether they win or lose.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of the evening was provided by Bobby Porter, the local trial horse for the lightweights, who outpointed Jack Jones, of the South End A. C. in the fifth number on the card. Jones took the first round but thereafter it was all in favor of the chunky little southpaw. He literally punched Jones' midsection and side full of holes with his long left-handed shots to the body and was given a great ovation when he was declared the winner. It was a split decision with Referee Kelley favoring Jones. It was Bobby's 11th fight and his third win against eight losses.

Joey Depan, hard-hitting bantamweight of the Keystate A. C., punched too fast and too hard for Umberto Vagnarini, of the Southwest A. C., Washington, and romped off with the decision of the referee and judges in the fourth contest on the program. Depan beat his much taller rival to the punch in most of the exchanges and his educated left hand found Vagnarini's head a perfect target throughout the match.

Jack Santley, Johnstown 135-pounder, who lost to Jimmie Catanese last month when he suffered a bad gash near his eye, returned last night to punch out a decisive triumph over Jack Knippenburg, the former sailor. Santley was too good for the ex-gob and took every round to gain an unanimous decision. Knippenburg was wilder than the proverbial March hare with his punches and most of them missed the target.

Paul Lepley won the "duke" over Melvin Washington by a 2-1 count and in the opener Jimmy Deetz won every round to gain an unanimous decision over Maurice Darr, local colored flyweight. Washington put up a nice fight against Lepley and looked like the winner at the finish but two officials cast their ballots for Lepley.

Wilbur Thrasher and Jim Steele, a pair of eight-year-old 70-pounders, put on a pleasing three-round exhibition to open the show.

Gilbert Becker refereed the exhibition and the first four bouts in the main show while James E. Jelley, Jr., handled the last five matches. Ross W. Prysock and John H. Doud were the judges, "Bobby" Cavanaugh, timer, and Nelson W. Pussler announcer.

Army Beats Out Irish For Top Gridiron Spot

143 Experts Give Cadets Edge Of 34 Points; Georgia Is Third

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, Nov. 11 (AP)—The nation's sports writers had just as much trouble today deciding whether Army or Notre Dame was the best team in the country as the Cadets and Irish had in finding out themselves last Saturday—but the "experts" gave it to Army in the closest kind of photo finish.

The writers apparently went on the old sports theory that "a champ is a champ until he's beaten." As a result, they voted the Army in front by exactly 34 points in what was probably as hot a battle of ballots as the weekly Associated Press poll has ever experienced.

Altogether, 143 sports writers from coast to coast—and the Stars and Stripes Sports Editor in Germany for good measure—went to the ballot box with their selections for the top ten teams in the nation. Of these, Army drew 57 undisputed first-place votes to 31 for the fighting Irish, who put the first mark in three years on the Cadets' careening three-year-long perfect record with last Saturday's scoreless thriller. And, hitting a new high for the poll, 36 writers voted for a first-place deadlock between the two teams, unable to see it one way or the other.

Georgia Is Third

Basing the count on the usual system of 10 points for a first-place ballot, 9 for a second, 8 for third, etc. Army finished with its narrow edge of 1,300½ points to 1,266½ for Notre Dame. The rest of the field was far out of it, although Georgia's unbeaten untied Bulldogs, coming fast in the stretch, showed even more power than a week ago in holding onto the third spot in the ranking.

The 19 first place votes the Cadets and Irish didn't get were tossed to the country's only major undefeated, untied outfits—Georgia and the University of California at Los Angeles. The Bulldogs picked up 12 of them, half a dozen more than they had last week, and the Pacific Coast Conference page-setters collected seven, four more than their top-spot vote of a week ago.

Drawing "mentions" on the ballots all the way from first to tenth place, the Bulldogs piled up a third-place total of 1,061½ points, while the Uclans held onto fourth with 827.

Penn Makes Big Gain

The 7-0 tumble of Rice before Arkansas after its stratospheric success over Texas, tumbled the Owls all the way out of the top ten, enabling Pennsylvania's ponderous Quakers, who only have to face Army next Saturday, to climb from ninth to fifth place in the poll with 646 points, as a result of their 41-6 romp over Columbia.

Texas, thumping Baylor, held onto sixth place with 531 points, as Georgia Tech moved up to seventh by joining the not-so-exclusive list of teams which have whipped Navy. Tennessee, nosing out Mississippi, dropped from seventh to eighth, and Illinois moved up from tenth to ninth. Replacing Rice in the select set was a second Western Conference member, the Michigan Wolverines who returned to the fold by taking tenth place as a result of their 55-7 mauling of Michigan State. The standings:

Team	First Place	Ties	Pts.
1—Army	57	36	1300½
2—Notre Dame	31	36	1266½
3—Georgia	12	—	1061½
4—U.C.L.A.	7	—	961½
5—Pennsylvania	—	—	531
7—Georgia Tech	—	—	350
8—Tennessee	—	—	315
9—Illinois	—	—	224
10—Michigan	—	—	212½

THE SECOND TEN: 11—Louisiana State, 149½; 12—Southern California, 96; 13—Ohio State, 93; 14—Rice, 86½; 15—North Carolina, 75; 16—Iowa, 60; 17—Arkansas, 48; 18—Yale, 42; 19—Holy Cross, 36; 20—Duke, 27.

Others receiving one or more points: Northwestern, 26; Delaware, 20; Tulsa, 19; Boston College, 14; Indiana, 6½; Muhlenberg and Hardin-Simmons, 6 each; Missouri and William & Mary, 5 each; Kansas, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Rutgers, 4 each; Wake Forest and Virginia, 3 each; North Carolina State, Kentucky and Tulane, 2 each; St. Norbert's (Wis.), California, Nevada and Gulford, 1 each.

Hahn's Mother Is Ill; Jayvee Contest Is Off

The football game scheduled today between the LaSalle and Fort Hill Jayvees has been postponed indefinitely due to the absence of Coach William P. Hahn, who has been called to North Carolina on account of the serious illness of his mother.

John J. "Bobby" Cavanaugh is slated to take over the Fort Hill varsity squad in event Hahn does not return by Thursday. The varsity does not play again until Thanksgiving Day when it meets Allegany.

Cavanaugh introduced football at Penn Avenue High School in 1932 and has coached Penn Avenue and Fort Hill basketball teams for 15 years.

BUSES WILL TAKE FANS TO LASALLE-BEALL GAME TURKEY DAY

The Cumberland and Western Transit Company will provide bus service from Cumberland to Frostburg for the Thanksgiving Day football game between LaSalle High School and Beall High School.

Curtis Sheppard Stops Petersen

The Hatchetman Flattens Indiana Heavy In 4th At Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Nov. 11 (AP) — Big Bill Petersen, Indianapolis heavyweight, achieved the unlikely tonight when he took five of Curtis (The Hatchetman) Sheppard's punches to the jaw without backtracking in the first round—but he was knocked out three frames later.

A total of 3,644 amazed fans watched Sheppard, who hails from Philadelphia, toss his best punches without visible effect in the first two rounds of a scheduled ten-rounder.

But the Hatchetman—who is the Maryland Boxing Commission's nominee as heavyweight title contender—hurt the rugged Petersen with body punches and knocking him down once in the third round.

In the fourth, Sheppard crashed several rights to Petersen's jaw. The latter staggered close in to stop the onslaught. When Sheppard pushed him away the Indianapolis clouter fell over backward and the fight was over.

Sheppard weighed 197½ and Petersen 203½ pounds. The gate was $9,111.

Frank Lacy 160, knocked out Joe O'Connell, 165, in the second round of a scheduled six-frame semi-windup. Both are Baltimoreans.

Injured Gridders Expected To Play Against Teachers

Henderson, Stanislawczyk Will Rest For Cats' Saturday Game

KEYSER, Nov. 11.—The Potomac State Catamounts emerged from their defeat at the hands of the California State Teachers College Vulcans last Saturday afternoon in fairly good shape. Only two players were injured and both of these boys will probably see action this Saturday afternoon when Potomac State tackles the West Liberty Hilltoppers on Stayman Field at 2 o'clock.

Joe Stanislawczyk and Homer Anderson were the only Cats injured against the Vulcans, Stanislawszyk, hard plunging fullback for the Loughmen, suffered a foot injury and will be kept out of practice this week in order to rest up. Lough thinks that Stanislawczyk will start against West Liberty. The other boy, Homer Henderson, right halfback for the Catamounts, suffered a back injury but will be in the starting lineup when the starting whistle blows this Saturday. Lough said, however, that Len Lenevich regular left end who was out of last week's tilt, will still be on the sidelines this week.

Neal Baisi and Bob Sauders will probably see action. Baisi has been out for the last two games after playing the right guard position in the first six contests. Sauders is a wing back for Potomac State.

Coach Dana "Horse" Lough said that blackboard drill would be held today and that "dummy scrimmage" would take place two of the three remaining practice days of the week. He said that one day might be given over to contact scrimmage but that is pending as Lough wishes to save the Cats from injuries that might hurt their chances against West Liberty.

The West Liberty Hilltoppers won their second West Virginia State Conference victory by rolling over Concord College last Saturday, 47-7. Potomac State beat Concord 13-6.

Four Nationally Rated Players Give Badminton Exhibition Here

Demonstration And Two Matches Are Witnessed By Large Crowd

The Cumberland Badminton Club is to be congratulated on a very interesting badminton exhibition last night at the Fort Hill School gymnasium by four nationally rated badminton players.

Basil Jones, English international champion, and well known coach in Canada and the United States as well as England, started the program with a demonstration and talk on helps and hints for better badminton, which was very enlightening to the players present.

Jones and Clinton Stephens next played a match of singles which Jones won 15 to 12.

Won Three State Titles

Stephens held New York, Connecticut, Washington, D. C. and other eastern champions before the war. After a lay-off of five and half years in the army he has won the New York, New Jersey, and Ohio state championships recently.

Mrs. Stephens has a national ranking of third in the United States, and has held the Maryland Singles championship for juniors for six years, and the senior championship the past three years in both singles and doubles.

Mr. Frank G. Roberts, known as "the grand old man" of Maryland badminton has held the Maryland singles and doubles championship for years. He has also held the Washington, D. C. title and traveled extensively giving exhibitions and creating an interest in badminton.

The most interesting and exciting match of the evening was the playing of Mr. Roberts against his daughter, Mrs. Patsy Clinton Stephens which produced longer rallies than the other contests, Mr. Roberts finally winning by one point.

Enthusiastic Crowd Attends

The exhibition was open to the public and a large number of spectators were amazed and enthusiastic at the clever playing and fast returns of the champions.

The Cumberland Badminton Club is composed of about 40 members from this section and has been in existence for a number of years. It meets every Monday and Thursday evenings and Saturday afternoons at the Fort Hill School gymnasium.

A shrimp luncheon was given the visitors by the club and its friends at the Elks Club after the exhibition.

WON 3 out of 4 AUTO RACES

When Racing-Drivers risked their lives on their tires, the WINNERS of 3 out of 4 recorded races in 1946 chose Riversides. Auto-race drivers who can choose any tires, deliberately buy "stock" Riversides right in Wards Stores. Not specially built tires, but the same tires YOU buy for your own car!

Just picture those "stock" Riversides on race-cars "burning up" the straight-away, skidding around rough turns, yet those Riversides 'take it!" That's positive proof of the high quality built into Wards tires. Consider that extra margin of safety when you need tires. Switch to Riversides—for more miles of greater safety.

Crowell And Klosterman Win Legion Fights

Wentz Defeated By Capital City Lightweight Ace

Jim Klosterman Cops 7th In Row; Santley, Niland, Depan, Porter Win

Johnny Crowell, hard-hitting lightweight of the Southwest Athletic Club, Washington, D. C., snapped the 11-bout winning streak of Al Wentz, of the Keystate Athletic Club, Johnstown, Pa., and lanky Jack Klosterman, Cumberland's southpaw welterweight, marked up his seventh straight ring triumph in two seasons at the expense of Ed Tawney, of Washington, D. C., in the top bouts of the amateur boxing show staged last night at the state armory by Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion.

Approximately 500 paying patrons turned out for the Armistice Day fistic program and witnessed a nine-bout card that was packed with action from start to finish. It was the second show of the season staged by the Legion and Matchmaker Robert V. "Sparky" Cruisholm.

Jack Wins Third Here

Crowell, who defeated Jimmie Catanese and Vance Sinclair, the Zan A. C. ace, from Morgantown, W. Va., in previous appearances here, made it three wins in a row in Legion shows by decisioning Wentz, the "Fighting High School Boy" from Johnstown in the ninth and final match on the card.

Wentz, a victor over Jack Jones, of this city, via a knockout in his first showing here last month, started out in whirlwind fashion, swarming all over Crowell with a two-fisted attack in the opening round but apparently spent himself. He hit the deck twice in the second round for one and seven counts from hard right-hand smashes to the jaw, was staggered with another right to the head as the third round opened but he managed to regain his bearings and turned the battle into a rousing finish.

Wentz Floored Twice

The knockdowns counted heavily against Wentz and his punches lacked steam as he courageously tried to pull the battle out of the fire in the final stanza. The first time Al went down he fell flat on his face but was up at the count of one. The second time he hit the resin he landed on his back and rested until Referee Jim Kelley reached the count of seven before arising and renewing hostilities.

Crowell was given the decision on a 2-1 vote, one of the judges casting his ballot for the Johnstown lad.

The Klosterman-Tawney affair was a jaw-punching contest from opening to closing gong and was not decided until the final round when "Big Jim" right-jabbed and left crossed and hooked his way to a clean-cut victory. Jim held a 2-1 edge in the voting at the close of the battle, one of the judges favoring Tawney.

It was a bitter struggle between a pair of hard-socking welterweights and it was anybody's fight until the local southpaw fired his big guns in the closing heat.

The seventh bout on the card was a bad one. In fact it was so smelly that one of the judges marked "no contest" on his ballot. It was between two colored middleweights, Ben Paugh and Bill Mann, and there wasn't a solid punch landed. Referee Kelley urged the boys to mix it but they slapped and clowned about for three rounds. Mann got a 2-0 decision at the finish.

Niland Decisions Mason

Joe Niland flashed his best fighting form in many moons to earn the decision over Johnny Mason, a timid welterweight from Washington D. C., in the sixth match. After Joe hit Mason on the chin with that looping left in the first round the Capital City boy stayed on the defensive a greater part of the second and third stanzas. The decision, which was unanimous, was roundly booed, but there was no doubt about Niland winning that one. It's an old Spanish custom to boo the Nilands whether they win or lose.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of the evening was provided by Bobby Porter, the local trial horse for the lightweights, who outpointed Jack Jones, of the South-End A. C. in the fifth number on the card. Jones took the first round but thereafter it was all in favor of the chunky little southpaw. He literally punched Jones' midsection and side full of holes with his long left-handed shots to the body and was given a great ovation when he was declared the winner. It was a split decision with Referee Kelley favoring Jones. It was Bobby's 11th fight and his third win against eight losses.

Joey Depan, hard-hitting bantamweight of the Keystate A. C., punched too fast and too hard for Umberto Vagnarini, of the Southwest A. C., Washington, and romped off with the decision of the referee and judges in the fourth contest on the program. Depan beat his much taller rival to the punch in most of the exchanges and his educated left hand found Vagnarini's head a perfect target throughout the match.

Jack Santley, Johnstown 135-pounder, who lost to Jimmie Catanese last month when he suffered a bad gash near his eye, returned last night to punch out a decisive triumph over Jack Knippenburg, the former sailor. Santley was too good for the ex-gob and took every round to gain an unanimous decision. Knippenburg was wilder than the proverbial March hare with his punches and most of them missed the target.

Paul Lepley won the "duke" over Melvin Washington by a 2-1 count and in the opener Jimmy Deetz won every round to gain an unanimous decision over Maurice Darr, local colored flyweight. Washington put up a nice fight against Lepley and looked like the winner at the finish but two officials cast their ballots for Lepley.

Wilbur Thrasher and Jim Steele, a pair of eight-year-old 70-pounders, put on a pleasing three-round exhibition to open the show.

Gilbert Becker refereed the exhibition and the first four bouts in the main show while James E. Jelley, Jr., handled the last five matches. Ross W. Prysock and John H. Doud were the judges, "Bobby" Cavanaugh, timer, and Nelson W. Pussler announcer.

PBC Show Nov. 25

It was announced that the Police Boys Club will hold the next amateur show on Monday, November 25 at SS. Peter and Paul gymnasium. John Henry Stitcher is the promoter.

FIGHT RESULTS

Army Beats Out Irish For Top Gridiron Spot

143 Experts Give Cadets Edge Of 34 Points; Georgia Is Third

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, Nov. 11 (AP)—The nation's sports writers had just as much trouble today deciding whether Army or Notre Dame was the best team in the country as the Cadets and Irish had in finding out themselves last Saturday—but the "experts" gave it to Army in the closest kind of photo finish.

The writers apparently went on the old sports theory that "a champ is a champ until he's beaten." As a result, they voted the Army in front by exactly 34 points in what was probably as hot a battle of ballots as the weekly Associated Press poll has ever experienced.

Altogether, 143 sports writers from coast to coast—and the Stars and Stripes Sports Editor in Germany for good measure—went to the ballot box with their selections for the top ten teams in the nation. Of these, Army drew 57 undisputed first-place votes to 31 for the fighting Irish, who put the first mark in three years on the Cadets' careening three-year-long perfect record with last Saturday's scoreless thriller. And, hitting a new high for the poll, 36 writers voted for a first-place deadlock between the two teams, unable to see it one way or the other.

Georgia Is Third

Basing the count on the usual system of 10 points for a first-place ballot, 9 for a second, 8 for third, etc. Army finished with its narrow edge of 1,300½ points to 1,266½ for Notre Dame. The rest of the field was far out of it, although Georgia's unbeaten untied Bulldogs, coming fast in the stretch, showed even more power than a week ago in holding onto the third spot in the ranking.

The 19 first place votes the Cadets and Irish didn't get were tossed to the country's only major undefeated, untied outfits—Georgia and the University of California at Los Angeles. The Bulldogs picked up 12 of them, half a dozen more than they had last week, and the Pacific Coast Conference page-setters collected seven, four more than their top-spot vote of a week ago.

Drawing "mentions" on the ballots all the way from first to tenth place, the Bulldogs piled up a third-place total of 1,061½ points, while the Uclans held onto fourth with 827.

Penn Makes Big Gain

The 7-0 tumble of Rice before Arkansas after its stratospheric success over Texas, tumbled the Owls all the way out of the top ten, enabling Pennsylvania's ponderous Quakers, who only have to face Army next Saturday, to climb from ninth to fifth place in the poll with 646 points, as a result of their 41-6 romp over Columbia.

Texas, thumping Baylor, held onto sixth place with 531 points, as Georgia Tech moved up to seventh by joining the not-so-exclusive list of teams which have whipped Navy. Tennessee, noting out Mississippi, dropped from seventh to eighth, and Illinois moved up from tenth to ninth. Replacing Rice in the select set was a second Western Conference member, the Michigan Wolverines who returned to the fold by taking tenth place as a result of their 55-7 mauling of Michigan State. The standings:

Team	First Place	Ties	Pts.
1—Army	57	36	1300½
2—Notre Dame	31	36	1266½
3—Georgia	12	—	1061½
4—U.C.L.A.	7	—	961½
5—Pennsylvania	—	—	531
7—Georgia Tech	—	—	350
8—Tennessee	—	—	315
9—Illinois	—	—	224
10—Michigan	—	—	212½

THE SECOND TEN: 11—Louisiana State, 149½; 12—Southern California, 96; 13—Ohio State, 93; 14—Rice, 86½; 15—North Carolina, 75; 16—Iowa, 60; 17—Arkansas, 48; 18—Yale, 42; 19—Holy Cross, 36; 20—Duke, 27.

Others receiving one or more points: Northwestern, 26; Delaware, 20; Tulsa, 19; Boston College, 14; Indiana, 6½; Muhlenberg and Hardin-Simmons, 6 each; Missouri and William & Mary, 5 each; Kansas, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Rutgers, 4 each; Wake Forest and Virginia, 3 each; North Carolina State, Kentucky and Tulane, 2 each; St. Norbert's (Wis.), California, Nevada and Gulford, 1 each.

Hahn's Mother Is Ill; Jayvee Contest Is Off

The football game scheduled today between the LaSalle and Fort Hill Jayvees has been postponed indefinitely due to the absence of Coach William P. Hahn, who has been called to North Carolina on account of the serious illness of his mother.

John J. "Bobby" Cavanaugh is slated to take over the Fort Hill varsity squad in event Hahn does not return by Thursday. The varsity does not play again until Thanksgiving Day when it meets Allegany.

Cavanaugh introduced football at Penn Avenue High School in 1932 and has coached Penn Avenue and Fort Hill basketball teams for 15 years.

Injured Gridders Expected To Play Against Teachers

Henderson, Stanislawczyk Will Rest For Cats' Saturday Game

KEYSER, Nov. 11.—The Potomac State Catamounts emerged from their defeat at the hands of the California State Teachers College Vulcans last Saturday afternoon in fairly good shape. Four Nationally Rated Players Give Badminton Exhibition Here

Demonstration And Two Matches Are Witnessed By Large Crowd

The Cumberland Badminton Club is to be congratulated on a very interesting badminton exhibition last night at the Fort Hill School gymnasium by four nationally rated badminton players.

Basil Jones, English international champion, and well known coach in Canada and the United States as well as England, started the program with a demonstration and talk on helps and hints for better badminton, which was very enlightening to the players present.

Jones and Clinton Stephens next played a match of singles which Jones won 15 to 12.

Won Three State Titles

Stephens held New York, Connecticut, Washington, D. C. and other eastern champions before the war. After a lay-off of five and half years in the army he has won the New York, New Jersey, and Ohio state championships recently.

Mrs. Stephens has a national ranking of third in the United States, and has held the Maryland Singles championship for juniors for six years, and the senior championship the past three years in both singles and doubles.

Mr. Frank G. Roberts, known as "the grand old man" of Maryland badminton has held the Maryland singles and doubles championship for years. He has also held the Washington, D. C. title and traveled extensively giving exhibitions and creating an interest in badminton.

The most interesting and exciting match of the evening was the playing of Mr. Roberts against his daughter, Mrs. Patsy Clinton Stephens which produced longer rallies than the other contests, Mr. Roberts finally winning by one point.

Enthusiastic Crowd Attends

The exhibition was open to the public and a large number of spectators were amazed and enthusiastic at the clever playing and fast returns of the champions.

The Cumberland Badminton Club is composed of about 40 members from this section and has been in existence for a number of years. It meets every Monday and Thursday evenings and Saturday afternoons at the Fort Hill School gymnasium.

A shrimp luncheon was given the visitors by the club and its friends at the Elks Club after the exhibition.

Bryant Spikes Rumor

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 11 (AP)—Kentucky Football Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant spiked rumors today that he was headed for Alabama to succeed Frank Thomas as head coach of the Crimson Tide.

"I have not been offered the Alabama job," Bryant said in commenting on "rumors" that he had been tagged to replace Thomas not later than the beginning of next season. "As a matter of fact, I have not been contacted concerning the job."

Yes... Identical to the tires sold at Wards!

RIVERSIDES

WON 3 out of 4 AUTO RACES

When Racing-Drivers risked their lives on their tires, the WINNERS of 3 out of 4 recorded races in 1946 chose Riversides. Auto-race drivers who can choose any tires, deliberately buy "stock" Riversides right in Wards Stores. Not specially built tires, but the same tires YOU buy for your own car!

Just picture those "stock" Riversides on race-cars "burning up" the straight-away, skidding around rough turns, yet those Riversides 'take it!" That's positive proof of the high quality built into Wards tires. Consider that extra margin of safety when you need tires. Switch to Riversides—for more miles of greater safety.

If we are temporarily out of your size, remember:—New tires are arriving at Wards every week.

(And Selling Fast!")

Cerdan Leaves For Fight

PARIS, Nov. 11—Marcel Cerdan, the French middleweight champion who leaves Tuesday for his Dec. 6 Madison Square Garden bout with Georgie Abrams, said today he was counting on his left hook to see him through to a world crown.

Cerdan said he planned to return to Europe in December to fight Britain's Vince Hawkins for the European title. If he gets past both Abrams and Hawkins, he expects to meet Tony Zale in a title scrap in

KEEPING UP WITH

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 11—Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who plans to make the story of "Sir Launcelot" on a lavish scale in technicolor at Universal-International, told me that his father before he died, mapped out the whole idea for him. "I hope," said young Doug, "to make a sort of Disney Fantasy, only with real live people. The whole story of the Knights of the Round Table, the famous King Arthur legend—when Knights were bold and ladies fair, is a gay adventure epic not unlike 'Robin Hood', one of Doug Sr.'s best movies."

"Sir Launcelot" would cost a fortune because it would be no good unless it were made with the right elaborate backgrounds. Doug Jr. says he probably will do part of it in London where he can use the enormous castles in England. "Of course," he said, "I won't get at 'Sir Launcelot' until next summer because I have 'Exile' and 'Terry and the Pirates' to make at Universal-International first."

Marion Davies was excited about "Dark Medallion", by Dorothy Langley, after she read it, as a movie for Margaret O'Brien. Now I know she'll be interested to hear that David Selznick has bought the rights and that Dorothy McGuire gets the top role. It will be made, of course, after Dorothy has her baby. But no little girl is set for the important child's role. The story is about a bitter woman who, although her life and dreams are doomed, has a spiritual awakening through a little girl. That's the part Marion wanted Margaret O'Brien to play. "Dark Medallion" will be produced by Dore Schary. How about borrowing Margaret O'Brien from MGM.? Did somebody say something about your right arm?

The most shocking story in months is the one told me about Josephine Baker, the negro chanteuse and dancer, who was the international rage during the giddy 20s and early '30s. It might not have come to light in this country if Ray Driscoll had not received a hurry up order to design some new gowns for her Paris opening and ship them over immediately. Driscoll, who had designed for Josephine in Europe, immediately sent along some new creations. Then came a letter revealing the following: "Clothes must be re-designed to completely cover Miss Baker's body. She was captured in Spain during the revolution and submitted to tortures that left permanent scars all over her body."

Chatter in Hollywood: Romance certainly flourishes under all conditions in Hollywood. Peggy Stewart, Gene Autry's leading lady and ex-wife of Don (Red) Barry, the Republic star, was almost killed last March on a runaway horse in "Trail to San Antonio", Autry's latest picture. She was rescued by Robert Shahan, Republic stunt man. Well, what could be more natural than that they sholud fall in love, so now they are getting married. Peggy has a three-year-old son, Michael, by Barry.

There's a lot of chit-chat that when the Duke and Duchess of Windsor reach Hollywood they will be the house guests of Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger. They are on the Queen Elizabeth which docks tomorrow. Sir Alexander Korda is also on board and if the Duke wanted to take a movie job, he would get it from Sir Alex, who, you remember, bought a story from wartime Prime Minister Winston Churchill. Since the former King has been pricing residences in California, well, it could be he would get acquainted with his neighbors through the Wangers.

The present Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt stands in but plenty good with her new mama-in-law—better, I am told, than any of her predecessors. You probably remember Neily married Phyllis Pablos in Las Vegas and then took her to New York to meet Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Sr., social arbiter and queen of New York society. Well, I hear tell Mrs. Vanderbilt Sr. likes Phyllis so well that she plans to leave her famous jewel collection to her.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Judith Anderson, noted actress and her husband, Luther Greene have dated the stork. Ditto Mary Lou Dix and Buddy Wolfe. Mary Lou was formerly wed to musical director Al Newman, and Wolfe is related to Barney Baruch . . . . Frances Rafferty will marry Bob Stanton, Dick Haymes' brother, as soon as her divorce is final . . . . Billy de Wolfe is once more free. He and Amy Arnell have postponed their marriage indefinitely . . . . Turhan Bey, the Turkish delight, out of uniform, at the Seacomber's with Yvonne De Carlo. I'm betting, however, on Robert Stack who holds first place in the lady's affections . . . . Warner Baxter's mother, who has been very well known to his fans because she took care of all his fan mail, has just undergone a very serious operation, but it's good news that despite her age Mrs. Baxter is making a wonderful recovery . . . . Travis Welles, well known radio producer, has been engaged by Arthur Hornblow as technical advisor on "The Hucksters". Well, T. will know just how the radio scenes should be played, as well as the office routine . . . . Mrs. John Carradine, who expects a baby in March, has been on the New York stage in "Duchess Of Malfi" with the inimitable John . . . Tyrone Power told me he had talked to Annabella, and the John Huston play "No Exit" opens November 26 at the Biltmore theater. Evelyn Keyes and John, who are in the east for the opening, remain until the 1st of December . . . . Bob Hope telephoned Dolores from Cincinnati to say hello, right when she was opening her gifts at the shower given her for the new Hope babies. Cass Daley gave the most distinctive gift, twin beds for the lucky babies . . . . Mrs. Gilda Dahlberg gave a party honoring the newlyweds, John Sutton and the former Bobbe Fidler. Just after John asked for his release from 20th, he was given a wonderful part in "Captain From Castile", so he and Bobbe will honeymoon in Mexico. Cesar Romero, who was at the Dahlberg soiree, was a sight, with a heavy beard which he has grown for "Castile". That's all today.

Cerdan Leaves For Fight

PARIS, Nov. 11—Marcel Cerdan, the French middleweight champion who leaves Tuesday for his Dec. 6 Madison Square Garden bout with Georgie Abrams, said today he was counting on his left hook to see him through to a world crown.

Cerdan said he planned to return to Europe in December to fight Britain's Vince Hawkins for the European title. If he gets past both Abrams and Hawkins, he expects to meet Tony Zale in a title scrap in

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 11—Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who plans to make the story of "Sir Launcelot" on a lavish scale in technicolor at Universal-International, told me that his father before he died, mapped out the whole idea for him. "I hope," said young Doug, "to make a sort of Disney Fantasy, only with real live people. The whole story of the Knights of the Round Table, the famous King Arthur legend—when Knights were bold and ladies fair, is a gay adventure epic not unlike 'Robin Hood', one of Doug Sr.'s best movies."

"Sir Launcelot" would cost a fortune because it would be no good unless it were made with the right elaborate backgrounds. Doug Jr. says he probably will do part of it in London where he can use the enormous castles in England. "Of course," he said, "I won't get at 'Sir Launcelot' until next summer because I have 'Exile' and 'Terry and the Pirates' to make at Universal-International first."

Marion Davies was excited about "Dark Medallion", by Dorothy Langley, after she read it, as a movie for Margaret O'Brien. Now I know she'll be interested to hear that David Selznick has bought the rights and that Dorothy McGuire gets the top role. It will be made, of course, after Dorothy has her baby. But no little girl is set for the important child's role. The story is about a bitter woman who, although her life and dreams are doomed, has a spiritual awakening through a little girl. That's the part Marion wanted Margaret O'Brien to play. "Dark Medallion" will be produced by Dore Schary. How about borrowing Margaret O'Brien from MGM.? Did somebody say something about your right arm?

The most shocking story in months is the one told me about Josephine Baker, the negro chanteuse and dancer, who was the international rage during the giddy 20s and early '30s. It might not have come to light in this country if Ray Driscoll had not received a hurry up order to design some new gowns for her Paris opening and ship them over immediately. Driscoll, who had designed for Josephine in Europe, immediately sent along some new creations. Then came a letter revealing the following: "Clothes must be re-designed to completely cover Miss Baker's body. She was captured in Spain during the revolution and submitted to tortures that left permanent scars all over her body."

Chatter in Hollywood: Romance certainly flourishes under all conditions in Hollywood. Peggy Stewart, Gene Autry's leading lady and ex-wife of Don (Red) Barry, the Republic star, was almost killed last March on a runaway horse in "Trail to San Antonio", Autry's latest picture. She was rescued by Robert Shahan, Republic stunt man. Well, what could be more natural than that they shoulud fall in love, so now they are getting married. Peggy has a three-year-old son, Michael, by Barry.

There's a lot of chit-chat that when the Duke and Duchess of Windsor reach Hollywood they will be the house guests of Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger. They are on the Queen Elizabeth which docks tomorrow. Sir Alexander Korda is also on board and if the Duke wanted to take a movie job, he would get it from Sir Alex, who, you remember, bought a story from wartime Prime Minister Winston Churchill. Since the former King has been pricing residences in California, well, it could be he would get acquainted with his neighbors through the Wangers.

The present Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt stands in but plenty good with her new mama-in-law—better, I am told, than any of her predecessors. You probably remember Neily married Phyllis Pablos in Las Vegas and then took her to New York to meet Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Sr., social arbiter and queen of New York society. Well, I hear tell Mrs. Vanderbilt Sr. likes Phyllis so well that she plans to leave her famous jewel collection to her.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Judith Anderson, noted actress and her husband, Luther Greene have dated the stork. Ditto Mary Lou Dix and Buddy Wolfe. Mary Lou was formerly wed to musical director Al Newman, and Wolfe is related to Barney Baruch . . . . Frances Rafferty will marry Bob Stanton, Dick Haymes' brother, as soon as her divorce is final . . . . Billy de Wolfe is once more free. He and Amy Arnell have postponed their marriage indefinitely . . . . Turhan Bey, the Turkish delight, out of uniform, at the Seacomber's with Yvonne De Carlo. I'm betting, however, on Robert Stack who holds first place in the lady's affections . . . . Warner Baxter's mother, who has been very well known to his fans because she took care of all his fan mail, has just undergone a very serious operation, but it's good news that despite her age Mrs. Baxter is making a wonderful recovery . . . . Travis Welles, well known radio producer, has been engaged by Arthur Hornblow as technical advisor on "The Hucksters". Well, T. will know just how the radio scenes should be played, as well as the office routine . . . . Mrs. John Carradine, who expects a baby in March, has been on the New York stage in "Duchess Of Malfi" with the inimitable John . . Tyrone Power told me he had talked to Annabella, and the John Huston play "No Exit" opens November 26 at the Biltmore theater. Evelyn Keyes and John, who are in the east for the opening, remain until the 1st of December . . . . Bob Hope telephoned Dolores from Cincinnati to say hello, right when she was opening her gifts at the shower given her for the new Hope babies. Cass Daley gave the most distinctive gift, twin beds for the lucky babies . . . . Mrs. Gilda Dahlberg gave a party honoring the newlyweds, John Sutton and the former Bobbe Fidler. Just after John asked for his release from 20th, he was given a wonderful part in "Captain From Castile", so he and Bobbe will honeymoon in Mexico. Cesar Romero, who was at the Dahlberg soiree, was a sight, with a heavy beard which he has grown for "Castile". That's all today.

'You And Alcohol' Series Goes On Network Tonight

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—A new discussion series, "You and Alcohol," opens a 13-week run on CBS at 6:15 p. m. Tuesday. The announced aim is "to acquaint the public with facts about alcohol and circumstances arising from its use as a beverage." Such aspects as social, medical, religious, legal, psychological, physiological will be touched upon by various authorities selected as speakers. Dr. E. M. Jellinek of Yale is to be the first speaker.

The Boston symphony hour of ABC at 9:30 will originate from Yale university at New Haven, Conn. Dr. Serge Koussevitsky will do the conducting.

Parks Johnson and Warren Hull are taking their CBS Vox Pop at 9 to Atlanta, Ga., where they expect to interview Gov. Ellis Arnall, Walter Disney and others.

Remember the stories of Lou Holtz as told in many a guesting in the Rudy Vallee shows, both old and new? Well, he's coming back in Rudy's program on NBC at 8 to tell some more. The orchestra for this series is that of Bennie Krueger.

Another guest of the night is to be George Peck of the movies, to do "Heaven Can Wait" for the Hollywood Players of CBS at 9:30 from Hollywood.

An additional Jimmy Blair song series has replaced the Cliff Edwards show on ABC at 4:30, five times a week, according to the program listings as currently issued.

From Cleveland on NBC at 7:30 is to come Dr. George Baehr in a discussion of "What Medical Research Has Done for the American People."

In Memoriam

In memory of our dear Mother, and wife, Mary C. Twigg, who died one year ago today, November 11, 1945.

Today brings sad memories of one
gone to rest,
Who will always be remembered
by the ones who loved her best,
Mother you are not forgotten, never
will your memories fade,
We will roam and scatter flowers
on the grave that God has made.

In loving memory of my dear Mother, Mrs. Minerva J. Robinette, who passed away seven years ago today.

Out in life's garden where sympathy grew,
God planted a soul. It was the soul of you.
Life's wonderful gardener, love seeking went through
Till he found a heart, 'twas the heart of you.
I have sought through life's garden of roses and yew
And found one sweet blossom all jeweled with dew.
Love, sympathy, faith—all unchanging and true,
Thats the heart of my Mother, dear Mother, tis you.

By her daughter,
MRS. H. W. CARROLL.

In Memoriam

In memory of our dear Mother, and wife, Mary C. Twigg, who died one year ago today, November 11, 1945.

Today brings sad memories of one
gone to rest,
Who will always be remembered
by the ones who loved her best,
Mother you are not forgotten, never
will your memories fade,
We will roam and scatter flowers
on the grave that God has made.

In loving memory of my dear Mother, Mrs. Minerva J. Robinette, who passed away seven years ago today.

Out in life's garden where sympathy grew,
God planted a soul, it was the soul of you.
Life's wonderful gardener, love seeking went through
Till he found a heart, 'twas the heart of you.
I have sought through life's garden of roses and yew
And found one sweet blossom all jeweled with dew,
Love, sympathy, faith—all unchanging and true,
That's the heart of my Mother, dear Mother, tis you.

Police Check Area Roads For Pair Who Fled Jail

Western Young Men Saw Way To Freedom At Somerset, Pa.

State Police were making a special check of all highways in this section last night for two young men from western states who escaped from the Somerset County, Pa., jail at Somerset about 8:30 p. m. after sawing two bars out of their cell-block window.

The fugitives, waiting to be sentenced in Somerset Quarter Sessions Court today on charges of car theft and carrying a pistol without a permit were identified by State Police as William Bryan Hinkle, 19, Yerington, Nev., and Jack Smith, 20, Hollywood, Calif.

Somerset County authorities said they hold detainers for the men on charges of liquor and jewelry store robberies in New York, New Jersey, Georgia and Florida, and that they are wanted in Baltimore for assault and armed robbery of $833.

Wanted By FBI

The sheriff's office said the FBI had asked that the men be held to face counts of transporting stolen cars across state lines in Arizona, California, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana and Texas. These alleged crimes, the sheriff's office said, apparently were committed after the men escaped from a prison labor camp near Los Angeles last August 24.

Deputy Sheriff C. W. Saylor at Somerset said that a short time after the men escaped a car was stolen in Somerset and wrecked on the Somerset-Berlin road. A second car, described as a blue Chrysler carrying Pennsylvania license UU296, later was stolen in Berlin.

Police said they believe Hinkle and Smith are riding in the latter car and that they were believed to be headed either to Route 40 over Route 219 or to Route 40 by way of Meyersdale, the Ellerslie section and LaVale.

State officers picked up a suspect on a bus arriving here from Meyersdale at 10:35 last night but released him when he was identified.

Used Hack Saws

Deputy Saylor said the men used four hack saws they obtained in an unknown manner to saw through two bars, then pushed the bars out, squeezed through the opening and dropped 16 to 18 feet to the ground.

The escape was reported by another prisoner to Sheriff John I. Smith, who was on duty at the time, Saylor said. Searching started immediately.

He added that the hack saw blades, two of them badly worn, were left on the cell floor.

Prisoners in the cell block said they did not notice Hinkle and Smith sawing the bars, the deputy stated, but he added, "We don't believe that." He said both men were searched thoroughly when they were locked up on October 5 and that an investigation will be made to determine how they obtained the saws.

Arrested After Wreck

Their arrest at Somerset resulted after they stole a car there and wrecked it while being chased by police, Deputy Saylor said. After the accident, the men fled on foot but both were arrested the same day, one on the Pennsylvania Turnpike and the other in Somerset.

Both men were said to be wearing brown trousers and sport shirts. They were not wearing hats when they escaped. Hinkle was described as being about six feet tall and weighing 180 to 185 pounds, and Smith about five feet 10 inches tall and weighing 155 to 160 pounds.

The strike of 10 part-time truck drivers at the Mt. Savage Coal Preparation Plant entered the sixth day without change in the reported dispute over the bases for paying the men.

The ten drivers according to a representative of the Teamsters union said the trouble began last Thursday when the owners set down the hauling rates. Five drivers who belong to the United Mine Workers Union are continuing to work at the plant.

Midland Youth Badly Hurt When Car Hits Pole

Richard Binegar, 17, of Midland, was admitted to Miners Hospital at about 10 o'clock last night in an unconscious condition, suffering from injuries sustained in an automobile mishap near Knapp's Meadows, Lonaconing.

According to persons living in the vicinity, the car in which Binegar was riding apparently struck and broke off a telephone pole, when the vehicle failed to negotiate a curve in the highway. A large telephone cable was also snapped and came down when the pole fell. The car was badly damaged.

Binegar was taken to the hospital by a passing motorist, and it was reported around Lonaconing that a second man had also been hurt in the accident. However, at the hospital, attaches said only Binegar was admitted, and at midnight he was still unconscious.

State Police Trooper William Baker was summoned and is investigating.

Amvets Continue Building Supply Plans For Vets

Lifting Of Price Controls Did Not Remove Restrictions, Orndorff Says

The veterans housing committee of J. Louis Wolford Post No. 1, Amvets, will proceed with their plans to "do everything possible," to get building supplies and materials here for veterans who wish to build homes, William B. Orndorff, post commander said last night.

Some building supply dealers and some contractors seem to have the idea that the lifting of price controls and liquidation of OPA also removed restrictions on construction, Orndorff said. This is not the case, he explained. The National Housing Authority and the Civilian Production Administration are still very much in business.

Oppose Illegal Use

"The veterans here have not complained about prices," Orndorff said, "although we do not want to see inflation sweep the country, as we saw it in many foreign lands. However, the problem we have been trying to do something about is this widespread illegal use of building materials for commercial and non-veteran construction, without proper priority, while a hundred or more local veterans can't get enough lumber, nails, etc., to put up a book shelf.

"Our housing committee has been authorized by the post," Orndorff explained, "to appear before the city and county officials, asking that no building permits be issued except for construction under proper federal priority.

Want Federal Investigator

"The committee has also asked for a Federal NHA investigator to be sent here to study information we have on about a score of illegal construction projects, and the channeling of building materials consigned here for veterans into non-veteran construction.

"The committee is also authorized to lay its information before the United States District Attorney or the federal grand jury, if this is necessary to get action," Orndorff said.

"Price ceilings on rent, and regulations regarding the sale and use of building materials still exist, as we understand the situation," the commander concluded, "and we are still determined to find out why the veteran who wants to build is being ignored in Cumberland, and also why federal regulations are being violated."

Election Analysis Shows Allegany County Voters Crossed Party Lines

Local Architect Designs New Type Business Building

All Concrete Store And Fur Vault Attracts Attention Of Trade Journal

Russ Minter, local architect, is given recognition in a national publication, "Architectural Concrete," this month, for his originality and feasibility in designing a modern all concrete retail store room and fur storage vault building.

The issue shows various all concrete designs as proposed by sixteen leading architects throughout the United States. Some are hospitals, schools, churches, apartment buildings and store rooms. T. Worth Jamison, Jr. and E. Russell Marcks, Baltimore architects, are credited with designing extremely modern all concrete buildings and grandstand for the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association at Upper Marlboro. The Baltimore firm and Minter are the only Maryland architects whose designs have been nationally approved in the issue.

Minter's design made for a local retail merchant, who asked that his name be kept anonymous for a time in connection with the proposed fur storage plant, is fireproof, mothproof, lightproof and completely air-conditioned.

It consists of a retail store on the first floor, with an all glass front and a four tier second floor furcoat storage vault, with automatic hoists, elevators, cat-walks, etc.

The building combines sales, repair and storage areas in compact efficient plans. Minter said last night his customer wanted something a little different and modern, so he made a study of various types of fur storage vaults, and then designed this one. It conforms with underwriters' specifications, and provides more safety than the underwriters' code requires, thereby lowering insurance costs, he declared.

Entirely of concrete, even the letters naming the store across the front are to be cast of concrete as a part of the building.

Approximately 53 Percent Of Registered Voters Cast Ballots Tuesday

By F. ALAN WEATHERHOLT

An analysis of the official returns of last Tuesday's General Election in Allegany County, reveals some interesting things about voting in this county, and indicates that in most cases, voters are inclined to follow lines closely, so far as county candidates are concerned, but do a little more serious thinking about state candidates.

While there are 43,925 voters registered in the county's 75 precincts, a total of 23,267 ballots were counted for the head of the ticket, or a total county-wide vote of about 53 per cent.

With Republicans making a clean sweep of the county, there were voters in some precincts who evidently did not hue to the party line, as is evidenced in the variance between majorities given various candidates.

Theodore R. McKeldin, GOP candidate for governor, polled 13,304 votes against 9,963 for William Preston Lane, Jr., his Democratic opponent. This is a difference of 3,341.

Beall Polled 14,185 Votes

J. Glenn Beall, GOP candidate for Congress polled 14,185 against 8,597 for his Democratic opponent Arch McDonald, or a difference of 5,588. This is 2,247 more votes for Beall than were given the GOP standard bearer in this county, which would seem to indicate that many Democrats crossed the party line.

In the contest for United States Senate, it is equally evident that many Republicans crossed the party line to vote for Herbert R. O'Conor, Democrat instead of David John Markey, Republican. O'Conor gleaned a total of 10,401 against Markey's 12,366, giving the Republican the closest margin of any candidate in this county. Markey's majority is 1,966, or 1,375 less than the majority given his running mate McKeldin and 3,622 fewer votes than the majority received by Beall.

While Republican leaders in the county are blaming themselves and Republican voters for not giving Markey sufficient majority to send him to the Senate, and admittedly are not overly proud of the vote cast for McKeldin against Lane, there is some consolation for them in the county returns.

The Democrats, in many ways, do not have too much to be joyous about when returns are studied precinct by precinct.

There are 20 normally Democratic precincts and 55 normally Republican precincts in this county.

Of the 20 Democratic precincts, Lane carried only 13. He lost seven of his own to McKeldin. In the whole county, Lane carried a total of 15 precincts, two of which were GOP precincts, carried by very narrow margins.

This analysis gives McKeldin a total of 60 precincts, including 53 Republican and seven Democratic precincts won with 15 lost of which only two were Republican.

The same analysis in the contest between O'Conor and Markey indicates that O'Conor carried a total of 24 county precincts, seven of which were Republican. He carried 17 Democratic precincts, losing three. Markey, therefore won 51 precincts, 48 of which were Republican and three Democratic.

Cumberland Voters Consistent

Beall practically swept the county clean, carrying 72 out of 75 precincts. Ironically enough, one of the three he lost was a Republican precinct. The precinct he lost was 17, Vale Summit, which has until the last registration been a Democratic precinct. It now shows 104 Republicans and 100 Democrats registered, so Beall probably had no real claim to it.

McDonald, won only three precincts in the county, and lost 18 of the Democratic precincts he should normally claim from his party.

Further analysis of the official returns shows the city of Cumberland voters were reasonably consistent in all sections.

South Cumberland, which is made up of all precincts in big District No. 4, voted as follows:

For Governor
McKeldin	1,693
Lane	1,364
For Congressman
Beall	1,689
McDonald	1,273
For U. S. Senator
Markey	1,539
O'Conor	1,273

The West Side of the city, designated as District No. 6, followed South Cumberland's example, and also gave the three Republican candidates majorities, although Mar-

Thousands View Annual Armistice Day Parade Here

Veterans' Patriotic And Civic Organizations Observe Anniversary

Veterans of two World Wars joined ranks here last night in a half-hour long street parade, commemorating the 28th anniversary of the signing of the Armistice which officially ended World War I.

The day, observed as a holiday generally by public, governmental and financial institutions, but with most retail establishments open for business as usual, was cold and damp, with slight rains throughout the afternoon. However, during the hour of the parade and for an hour or so before, no rain fell, and several thousand people lined the streets of the business section to see the review.

Led by a police escort and marshalled by Capt. Thomas F. Conlon, the marchers formed at Maryland State Armory and moved northward on Centre street to Market, south on Mechanic to Baltimore, south on George street and disbanded at the Armory.

Hyndman High School Band, Mt. Savage Jr. O. U. A. M. Band, Allegany and Fort Hill High School Bands, Farrady Post No. 24, American Legion Drum Corps of Frostburg, Henry Hart Post No. 1411, American Legion Drum Corps and Squadron No. 13, Sons of the Legion Drum and Bugle Corps, were the music units in line.

Many Organizations March

Other organizations participating included, Cumberland Girl Scouts, Military Order of Purple Heart, Woodmen of the World Drill team, J. Louis Wolford Post No. 1, Amvets, Forty and Eight, Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion; Henry Hart Post No. 1411 VFW; Algonquin Post No. 2, Legion of the Guardsmen; Knobley Mountain Post No. 136 American Legion of Ridgeley; Navy League and Navy Mothers.

Recruiting services, volunteer fire companies, a platoon of horsemen, and color guards from several organizations also appeared.

The Amvets had the largest contingent of local veterans in line and were led by Post Commander William B. Orndorff and Major Thomas B. Finan.

The second largest unit of marching veterans came from Frostburg with Farrady Post Drum and Bugle Corps.

It was estimated there were between 1,500 and 2,000 veterans in the line of march but they were scattered with various veterans organizations.

The largest single unit in the whole parade was the group of Girl Scouts all neatly attired in scout uniforms, and marching much better than some of the ex-servicemen.

A large plate glass in the center window of the McCrory Department Store, Baltimore street, was broken last night when an unidentified man struck James F. Brown, Springfield, W. Va., in the face and knocked him against the building.

Detective Thomas J. See, who investigated, said Brown reported that he was walking down the street after the Armistice Day parade when a short dark-haired man struck him in the face.

Brown was questioned at Police Headquarters and then released. See said Brown didn't appear to be hurt. The plate glass was in a window where Christmas cards were being displayed and no damage other than that of the window was caused, See said.

Santa's Toy Supply Much Improved, But Trains, Wagons Are Still Out

Babydolls, Games And Books Are Plentiful For This Christmas

By JOHN P. MOODY

Santa Claus will be carrying a much heavier pack when he visits local homes this Christmas eve, but he will still be unable to fill the good little boys and girls requests for steel toys, such as electric trains, wagons, and toy automobiles.

For mother and dad the news isn't too good either, for the prices of the more desirable playthings, are "slightly up," according to managers of local toy centers. However, babydolls, games, and books are plentiful, and the cost is "well within reason."

With the exception of rubber dolls, little girls will have a wide selection of beautiful creations that range from $1.50 to $16, one department manager reported. Of course, almost without exception, the toys, for the first time in the nation's history are exclusively American made.

Even the Christmas tree balls and decorations, almost unknown to American manufacturers in previous years, will carry the "made in U.S." label this year. The decorations will be a little less colorful, local retailers report, but will be much more durable than the flimsy creations that adorned pine trees in the past.

As for, those long strings of electric lights that usually add the final touch to trees, local dealers hold little hope. "We have promises of shipments, but as yet we haven't seen a thing in that line," is the usual report.

Many Items Return

More plentiful, than at anytime during the past five years, are the wooden tables, chairs and desks, for which Santa usually receives so many requests. Plastic dishes and miniature stoves and cabinets are also much in evidence, in the local toy departments.

Steel runner sleds, scooters, and baby carriages, as well as bicycles are sufficient to meet the demands of children this year, but they are ranging a little higher in price than they were in the prewar years. Sleds are priced from $3.98 to $10.98 and some of the tricycles are selling for as much as $38.

Many of the "impossible" wartime items have returned to the market, including chemical sets, construction games, along with mechanical

Gas Company Cancels Orders For Home Heating Converters

Fuel Plentiful But Lines Are Inadequate Due To Pipe Shortage

In an effort to preserve and maintain their standards of service to the public, The Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company has requested that property owners in this area refrain from converting heating plants to gas burners, and is accepting no more orders for gas conversion units.

According to company officials here, all plumbers, dealers and distributors of gas heating systems have been asked to make no installations until further notice, and a number of orders already on hand have been cancelled.

The difficulty is not due to a shortage of natural gas, but due to lack of facilities to pipe the gas to the consumers, local management explains. Present gas lines are already taxed to the limit, and further conversion to gas heating, might create a shortage and cause discomfort and unpleasantness to those already dependent upon gas for heating their homes.

Between 500 and 600 home heating plants in this vicinity have already been converted to gas heating, and the demand is growing as prices of coal and oil heat advance, officers of the company here state. However, no orders for conversion units are being accepted and those on hand have been cancelled.

The situation is not entirely a local one.

The over-all picture of natural gas companies throughout the East is about the same. There is plenty of natural gas, but for the past five years, due primarily to the war, gas companies have not been able to obtain pipe, fittings, etc., to extend their lines, to replace obsolete lines, or to increase their transportation facilities.

Much Gas Wasted

According to some estimates, there are 684 billion cubic feet of natural gas wasted each year. Since there are insufficient lines to pipe the gas to market, drillers for oil in Texas fields allow it to escape into the air or burn it at the wells. Travelers throughout the Southwest see these gigantic flares lighting the night sky for miles.

It is estimated that enough gas is lost in the Southwestern fields to properly heat three to five million homes a year. In the state of Texas

Police Check Area Roads For Pair Who Fled Jail

Western Young Men Saw Way To Freedom At Somerset, Pa.

State Police were making a special check of all highways in this section last night for two young men from western states who escaped from the Somerset County, Pa., jail at Somerset about 8:30 p. m. after sawing two bars out of their cell-block window.

The fugitives, waiting to be sentenced in Somerset Quarter Sessions Court today on charges of car theft and carrying a pistol without a permit were identified by State Police as William Bryan Hinkle, 19, Yerington, Nev., and Jack Smith, 20, Hollywood, Calif.

Somerset County authorities said they hold detainers for the men on charges of liquor and jewelry store robberies in New York, New Jersey, Georgia and Florida, and that they are wanted in Baltimore for assault and armed robbery of $833.

Wanted By FBI

The sheriff's office said the FBI had asked that the men be held to face counts of transporting stolen cars across state lines in Arizona, California, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana and Texas. These alleged crimes, the sheriff's office said, apparently were committed after the men escaped from a prison labor camp near Los Angeles last August 24.

Deputy Sheriff C. W. Saylor at Somerset said that a short time after the men escaped a car was stolen in Somerset and wrecked on the Somerset-Berlin road. A second car, described as a blue Chrysler carrying Pennsylvania license UU296, later was stolen in Berlin.

Police said they believe Hinkle and Smith are riding in the latter car and that they were believed to be headed either to Route 40 over Route 219 or to Route 40 by way of Meyersdale, the Ellerslie section and LaVale.

State officers picked up a suspect on a bus arriving here from Meyersdale at 10:35 last night but released him when he was identified.

Used Hack Saws

Deputy Saylor said the men used four hack saws they obtained in an unknown manner to saw through two bars, then pushed the bars out, squeezed through the opening and dropped 16 to 18 feet to the ground.

The escape was reported by another prisoner to Sheriff John I. Smith, who was on duty at the time, Saylor said. Searching started immediately.

He added that the hack saw blades, two of them badly worn, were left on the cell floor.

Prisoners in the cell block said they did not notice Hinkle and Smith sawing the bars, the deputy stated, but he added, "We don't believe that." He said both men were searched thoroughly when they were locked up on October 5 and that an investigation will be made to determine how they obtained the saws.

Arrested After Wreck

Their arrest at Somerset resulted after they stole a car there and wrecked it while being chased by police, Deputy Saylor said. After the accident, the men fled on foot but both were arrested the same day, one on the Pennsylvania Turnpike and the other in Somerset.

Both men were said to be wearing brown trousers and sport shirts. They were not wearing hats when they escaped. Hinkle was described as being about six feet tall and weighing 180 to 185 pounds, and Smith about five feet 10 inches tall and weighing 155 to 160 pounds.

Midland Youth Badly Hurt When Car Hits Pole

Richard Binegar, 17, of Midland, was admitted to Miners Hospital at about 10 o'clock last night in an unconscious condition, suffering from injuries sustained in an automobile mishap near Knapp's Meadows, Lonaconing.

According to persons living in the vicinity, the car in which Binegar was riding apparently struck and broke off a telephone pole, when the vehicle failed to negotiate a curve in the highway. A large telephone cable was also snapped and came down when the pole fell. The car was badly damaged.

Binegar was taken to the hospital by a passing motorist, and it was reported around Lonaconing that a second man had also been hurt in the accident. However, at the hospital, attaches said only Binegar was admitted, and at midnight he was still unconscious.

State Police Trooper William Baker was summoned and is investigating.

Amvets Continue Building Supply Plans For Vets

Lifting Of Price Controls Did Not Remove Restrictions, Orndorff Says

The veterans housing committee of J. Louis Wolford Post No. 1, Amvets, will proceed with their plans to "do everything possible," to get building supplies and materials here for veterans who wish to build homes, William B. Orndorff, post commander said last night.

Some building supply dealers and some contractors seem to have the idea that the lifting of price controls and liquidation of OPA also removed restrictions on construction, Orndorff said. This is not the case, he explained. The National Housing Authority and the Civilian Production Administration are still very much in business.

Oppose Illegal Use

"The veterans here have not complained about prices," Orndorff said, "although we do not want to see inflation sweep the country, as we saw it in many foreign lands. However, the problem we have been trying to do something about is this widespread illegal use of building materials for commercial and non-veteran construction, without proper priority, while a hundred or more local veterans can't get enough lumber, nails, etc., to put up a book shelf.

"Our housing committee has been authorized by the post," Orndorff explained, "to appear before the city and county officials, asking that no building permits be issued except for construction under proper federal priority.

Want Federal Investigator

"The committee has also asked for a Federal NHA investigator to be sent here to study information we have on about a score of illegal construction projects, and the channeling of building materials consigned here for veterans into non-veteran construction.

"The committee is also authorized to lay its information before the United States District Attorney or the federal grand jury, if this is necessary to get action," Orndorff said.

"Price ceilings on rent, and regulations regarding the sale and use of building materials still exist, as we understand the situation," the commander concluded, "and we are still determined to find out why the veteran who wants to build is being ignored in Cumberland, and also why federal regulations are being violated."

Election Analysis Shows Allegany County Voters Crossed Party Lines

Approximately 53 Percent Of Registered Voters Cast Ballots Tuesday

By F. ALAN WEATHERHOLT

An analysis of the official returns of last Tuesday's General Election in Allegany County, reveals some interesting things about voting in this county, and indicates that in most cases, voters are inclined to follow lines closely, so far as county candidates are concerned, but do a little more serious thinking about state candidates.

While there are 43,925 voters registered in the county's 75 precincts, a total of 23,267 ballots were counted for the head of the ticket, or a total county-wide vote of about 53 per cent.

With Republicans making a clean sweep of the county, there were voters in some precincts who evidently did not hue to the party line, as is evidenced in the variance between majorities given various candidates.

Theodore R. McKeldin, GOP candidate for governor, polled 13,304 votes against 9,963 for William Preston Lane, Jr., his Democratic opponent. This is a difference of 3,341.

Beall Polled 14,185 Votes

J. Glenn Beall, GOP candidate for Congress polled 14,185 against 8,597 for his Democratic opponent Arch McDonald, or a difference of 5,588. This is 2,247 more votes for Beall than were given the GOP standard bearer in this county, which would seem to indicate that many Democrats crossed the party line.

In the contest for United States Senate, it is equally evident that many Republicans crossed the party line to vote for Herbert R. O'Conor, Democrat instead of David John Markey, Republican. O'Conor gleaned a total of 10,401 against Markey's 12,366, giving the Republican the closest margin of any candidate in this county. Markey's majority is 1,966, or 1,375 less than the majority given his running mate McKeldin and 3,622 fewer votes than the majority received by Beall.

While Republican leaders in the county are blaming themselves and Republican voters for not giving Markey sufficient majority to send him to the Senate, and admittedly are not overly proud of the vote cast for McKeldin against Lane, there is some consolation for them in the county returns.

The Democrats, in many ways, do not have too much to be joyous about when returns are studied precinct by precinct.

There are 20 normally Democratic precincts and 55 normally Republican precincts in this county.

Of the 20 Democratic precincts, Lane carried only 13. He lost seven of his own to McKeldin. In the whole county, Lane carried a total of 15 precincts, two of which were GOP precincts, carried by very narrow margins.

This analysis gives McKeldin a total of 60 precincts, including 53 Republican and seven Democratic precincts won with 15 lost of which only two were Republican.

The same analysis in the contest between O'Conor and Markey indicates that O'Conor carried a total of 24 county precincts, seven of which were Republican. He carried 17 Democratic precincts, losing three. Markey, therefore won 51 precincts, 48 of which were Republican and three Democratic.

Cumberland Voters Consistent

Beall practically swept the county clean, carrying 72 out of 75 precincts. Ironically enough, one of the three he lost was a Republican precinct. The precinct he lost was 17, Vale Summit, which has until the last registration been a Democratic precinct. It now shows 104 Republicans and 100 Democrats registered, so Beall probably had no real claim to it.

McDonald, won only three precincts in the county, and lost 18 of the Democratic precincts he should normally claim from his party.

Further analysis of the official returns shows the city of Cumberland voters were reasonably consistent in all sections.

South Cumberland, which is made up of all precincts in big District No. 4, voted as follows:

For Governor
McKeldin	1,693
Lane	1,364
For Congressman
Beall	1,689
McDonald	1,273
For U. S. Senator
Markey	1,539
O'Conor	1,273

The West Side of the city, designated as District No. 6, followed South Cumberland's example, and also gave the three Republican candidates majorities, although Mar-

Gas Company Cancels Orders For Home Heating Converters

Fuel Plentiful But Lines Are Inadequate Due To Pipe Shortage

In an effort to preserve and maintain their standards of service to the public, The Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company has requested that property owners in this area refrain from converting heating plants to gas burners, and is accepting no more orders for gas conversion units.

According to company officials here, all plumbers, dealers and distributors of gas heating systems have been asked to make no installations until further notice, and a number of orders already on hand have been cancelled.

The difficulty is not due to a shortage of natural gas, but due to lack of facilities to pipe the gas to the consumers, local management explains. Present gas lines are already taxed to the limit, and further conversion to gas heating, might create a shortage and cause discomfort and unpleasantness to those already dependent upon gas for heating their homes.

Between 500 and 600 home heating plants in this vicinity have already been converted to gas heating, and the demand is growing as prices of coal and oil heat advance, officers of the company here state. However, no orders for conversion units are being accepted and those on hand have been cancelled.

The situation is not entirely a local one.

The over-all picture of natural gas companies throughout the East is about the same. There is plenty of natural gas, but for the past five years, due primarily to the war, gas companies have not been able to obtain pipe, fittings, etc., to extend their lines, to replace obsolete lines, or to increase their transportation facilities.

Much Gas Wasted

According to some estimates, there are 684 billion cubic feet of natural gas wasted each year. Since there are insufficient lines to pipe the gas to market, drillers for oil in Texas fields allow it to escape into the air or burn it at the wells. Travelers throughout the Southwest see these gigantic flares lighting the night sky for miles.

It is estimated that enough gas is lost in the Southwestern fields to properly heat three to five million homes a year. In the state of Texas

Thousands View Annual Armistice Day Parade Here

Veterans' Patriotic And Civic Organizations Observe Anniversary

Veterans of two World Wars joined ranks here last night in a half-hour long street parade, commemorating the 28th anniversary of the signing of the Armistice which officially ended World War I.

The day, observed as a holiday generally by public, governmental and financial institutions, but with most retail establishments open for business as usual, was cold and damp with slight rains throughout the afternoon. However, during the hour of the parade and for an hour or so before, no rain fell, and several thousand people lined the streets of the business section to see the review.

Led by a police escort and marshalled by Capt. Thomas F. Conlon, the marchers formed at Maryland State Armory and moved northward on Centre street to Market, south on Mechanic to Baltimore, south on George street and disbanded at the Armory.

Hyndman High School Band, Mt. Savage Jr. O. U. A. M. Band, Allegany and Fort Hill High School Bands, Farrady Post No. 24, American Legion Drum Corps of Frostburg, Henry Hart Post No. 1411, American Legion Drum Corps and Squadron No. 13, Sons of the Legion Drum and Bugle Corps, were the music units in line.

Many Organizations March

Other organizations participating included, Cumberland Girl Scouts, Military Order of Purple Heart, Woodmen of the World Drill team, J. Louis Wolford Post No. 1, Amvets, Forty and Eight, Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion; Henry Hart Post No. 1411 VFW; Algonquin Post No. 2, Legion of the Guardsmen; Knobley Mountain Post No. 136 American Legion of Ridgeley; Navy League and Navy Mothers.

Recruiting services, volunteer fire companies, a platoon of horsemen, and color guards from several organizations also appeared.

The Amvets had the largest contingent of local veterans in line and were led by Post Commander William B. Orndorff and Major Thomas B. Finan.

The second largest unit of marching veterans came from Frostburg with Farrady Post Drum and Bugle Corps.

It was estimated there were between 1,500 and 2,000 veterans in the line of march but they were scattered with various veterans organizations.

The largest single unit in the whole parade was the group of Girl Scouts all neatly attired in scout uniforms, and marching much better than some of the ex-servicemen.

Man Pushed Through Window At McCrory's

A large plate glass in the center window of the McCrory Department Store, Baltimore street, was broken last night when an unidentified man struck James F. Brown, Springfield, W. Va., in the face and knocked him against the building.

Detective Thomas J. See, who investigated, said Brown reported that he was walking down the street after the Armistice Day parade when a short dark-haired man struck him in the face.

Brown was questioned at Police Headquarters and then released. See said Brown didn't appear to be hurt. The plate glass was in a window where Christmas cards were being displayed and no damage other than that of the window was caused, See said.

Santa's Toy Supply Much Improved, But Trains, Wagons Are Still Out

Babydolls, Games And Books Are Plentiful For This Christmas

By JOHN P. MOODY

Santa Claus will be carrying a much heavier pack when he visits local homes this Christmas eve, but he will still be unable to fill the good little boys and girls requests for steel toys, such as electric trains, wagons, and toy automobiles.

For mother and dad the news isn't too good either, for the prices of the more desirable playthings, are "slightly up," according to managers of local toy centers. However, babydolls, games, and books are plentiful, and the cost is "well within reason."

With the exception of rubber dolls, little girls will have a wide selection of beautiful creations that range from $1.50 to $16, one department manager reported. Of course, almost without exception, the toys, for the first time in the nation's history are exclusively American made.

Even the Christmas tree balls and decorations, almost unknown to American manufacturers in previous years, will carry the "made in U.S." label this year. The decorations will be a little less colorful, local retailers report, but will be much more durable than the flimsy creations that adorned pine trees in the past.

As for those long strings of electric lights that usually add the final touch to trees, local dealers hold little hope. "We have promises of shipments, but as yet we haven't seen a thing in that line," is the usual report.

Many Items Return

More plentiful, than at anytime during the past five years, are the wooden tables, chairs and desks, for which Santa usually receives so many requests. Plastic dishes and miniature stoves and cabinets are also much in evidence, in the local toy departments.

Steel runner sleds, scooters, and baby carriages, as well as bicycles are sufficient to meet the demands of children this year, but they are ranging a little higher in price than they were in the prewar years. Sleds are priced from $3.98 to $10.98 and some of the tricycles are selling for as much as $38.

Many of the "impossible" wartime items have returned to the market, including chemical sets, construction games, along with mechanical
